Chapter 7: ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् (Ishavasyam Idam Sarvam)

Paper 3 — (progressively harder)

Subject	Sanskrit (NCERT Class 7, Deepakam)
Chapter	7 — ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् (Ishavasyam Idam Sarvam)
Total Questions	60 (Multiple Choice, single correct)
Maximum Marks	240
Suggested Time	90 minutes

Marking scheme: +4 for each correct answer · -1 for each wrong answer · 0 if unattempted.

Instructions: Each question has four options (A), (B), (C), (D); exactly one is correct. Classic Paper-3 traps: the -स्य- future marker (दास्यन्ति 'they shall give', not present/past), the -मत्/-वत् 'possessing' suffix (सर्वशक्तिमान् = all-powerful, never 'lacking'), the gender-distinguished trio ब्रह्म (neuter, the Absolute) / ब्रह्मन् (masc., a priest) / ब्रह्मा (masc., the creator-god), the instrumental case marking the MEANS of worship (ध्यानेन, नामकीर्तनेन), and the rank of यक्ष/गन्धर्व/किन्नर as semi-divine (upa-deva) BELOW the देवः. Do not write on this paper — mark answers on your answer sheet.

1. The gloss ईश्वरेण व्याप्तम् uses the case-ending -एण on ईश्वर. In ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम्, this tells us that the Lord is the _____ by which all is pervaded, while इदं सर्वम् is what gets pervaded.

- (A) the object being pervaded, so 'the Lord is pervaded by all this'
- (B) a place, so 'all this lives inside the Lord's house'
- (C) the agent/means (instrumental), so 'all this is pervaded BY the Lord'
- (D) a recipient, so 'all this is given to the Lord'

2. A student paraphrases the verse as 'Some of the world is the Lord's, the rest is ours to grab.' Why does this contradict ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम्?

- (A) सर्वम् ('all') means the WHOLE world is pervaded by the Lord, leaving nothing to grab as exclusively one's own
- (B) सर्वम् means 'half', so only half is the Lord's
- (C) इदम् means 'the next world', so this world is ours
- (D) the verse is about temples, so the world outside is ours

3. If everything is pervaded by the Lord, the chapter's wise person treats both a temple idol and an ordinary stone with reverence. The deepest reason is that:

- (A) only idols carry the Lord, so reverence to a stone is a mistake the wise avoid
- (B) the Lord lives only in the sky, so earthly things deserve equal indifference
- (C) stones and idols are both lifeless, so neither truly matters
- (D) the same all-pervading Lord (ईश) is present in all this (इदं सर्वम्), not confined to special objects

4. ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् is the opening of the Ishopanishad. Which statement best captures why a grammar chapter pairs this metaphysical line with parsing exercises?

- (A) the verse is grammatically wrong and must be corrected by the exercises
- (B) understanding the verse requires correctly reading words like ईश (Lord) and सर्वम् (all), so meaning and grammar reinforce each other
- (C) the verse has no meaning, so only its grammar can be studied
- (D) grammar and meaning are unrelated; the pairing is accidental

5. Which English phrase is the closest faithful rendering of इदं सर्वम् ईशावास्यम् taken as a whole sentence?

- (A) 'This single thing belongs to the Lord alone'
- (B) 'The Lord has abandoned all this'
- (C) 'All this, whatever exists, is to be enveloped/pervaded by the Lord'
- (D) 'Nothing here has any connection to the Lord'

6. A child argues: 'Since the Lord is everywhere, I can be careless — He will fix everything.' How does the chapter's ethic answer this?

- (A) all-pervasion calls for MORE care and reverence toward the world, not carelessness
- (B) the child is right; pervasion removes all human duty
- (C) the Lord is only in temples, so outside them carelessness is fine
- (D) pervasion means the world is unreal, so nothing one does matters

7. ईश and ईश्वर are linked because both come from the root ईश्. Given that ईश् means 'to rule, to own', the most precise shared sense of ईश and ईश्वर is:

- (A) 'the one who rules / owns' — i.e. the Lord, the Supreme
- (B) 'the one who is ruled' — i.e. a subject or servant
- (C) 'the one who eats' — i.e. an eater
- (D) 'the place of ruling' — i.e. a palace

8. Why is it a category error to treat the ईश in ईशावास्यम् like the English adjective-suffix '-ish' (as in 'childish')?

- (A) both mean 'somewhat like', so the comparison is exact
- (B) ईश is also a suffix, just spelled in Devanagari
- (C) '-ish' comes from the same root ईश्
- (D) ईश is a full Sanskrit noun ('Lord', root ईश्), whereas '-ish' is an English bound suffix meaning 'somewhat like'; they share only a sound

9. From the root ईश् ('to rule, to own'), which derivation chain is correct?

- (A) ईश् → शृगाल ('fox') → ईश्वर, a chain of animals
- (B) ईश् → ईश ('student') → ईश्वर ('teacher')
- (C) ईश् (root) → ईश ('ruler/Lord') → ईश्वर ('the Lord'), all naming the Supreme
- (D) ईश् → घट ('pot') → ईश्वर ('potter')

10. A devotee writes ईशावास्यम् but explains it as 'pervaded by a fox'. Two errors are stacked here. They are:

- (A) correctly reading ईश, but wrongly reading वास्य as 'fox'
- (B) misreading ईश as a fox (it is 'Lord', root ईश्) and ignoring वास्य ('to be dwelt-in/pervaded')
- (C) correctly reading both words; the explanation is fine
- (D) reading ईश as 'fox' is correct, but वास्य means 'temple'

11. Which single sentence both names the Lord and gives its etymology consistently?

- (A) 'ईश्वरः ईश्-धातोः निष्पन्नः, यः सर्वं शास्ति' — 'Ishvara is derived from the root ईश्, He who rules all'
- (B) 'ईश्वरः शृगाल-शब्दात् निष्पन्नः' — 'Ishvara is derived from the word for fox'
- (C) 'ईश्वरः घट-धातोः निष्पन्नः' — 'Ishvara is derived from the root for pot'
- (D) 'ईश्वरः इति आङ्ग्ल-प्रत्ययः' — 'Ishvara is an English suffix'

12. Three words sound alike: ब्रह्म, ब्रह्मन्, ब्रह्मा. A student matches them as: ब्रह्म = creator-god, ब्रह्मन् = the Absolute, ब्रह्मा = a priest. How many of the three matches are correct?

- (A) zero — all three are mismatched
- (B) all three are correct
- (C) exactly one (ब्रह्मा) is correct
- (D) exactly two are correct

13. Which feature of Sanskrit makes ब्रह्म, ब्रह्मन् and ब्रह्मा three DIFFERENT words rather than one?

- (A) they differ only in the speaker's tone of voice
- (B) they are spelled identically and meaning is guessed from context
- (C) they differ only in the time of day they are used
- (D) they differ in grammatical gender and stem-form, and gender changes the meaning

14. ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् speaks of the impersonal, all-pervading Supreme. Which of the three 'Brahma' words is therefore its proper referent?

- (A) the masculine ब्रह्मन् — a priest performing the verse
- (B) the masculine ब्रह्मा — the personal creator-god
- (C) none of them, because the verse means a fox
- (D) the neuter ब्रह्म — the impersonal Absolute that pervades all

15. If a temple priest who performs rituals is meant, which form is correct, and what is its gender?

- (A) ब्रह्म — neuter
- (B) ब्रह्मन् — masculine
- (C) ब्रह्मा — neuter
- (D) ब्रह्म — masculine

16. Arrange by what each names: (i) the impersonal Absolute, (ii) the personal creator-god, (iii) a ritual priest. The matching trio in that order is:

- | | |
|-------------------------------|-------------------------------|
| (A) ब्रह्मन्, ब्रह्म, ब्रह्मा | (B) ब्रह्म, ब्रह्मा, ब्रह्मन् |
| (C) ब्रह्मा, ब्रह्मन्, ब्रह्म | (D) ब्रह्म, ब्रह्मन्, ब्रह्मा |

17. A line reads 'ब्रह्मा जगत् असृजत्' ('Brahma created the world'). Could the neuter ब्रह्म replace ब्रह्मा here without changing the meaning?

- (A) no — creating the world is the act of the personal creator-god ब्रह्मा, not of the impersonal Absolute ब्रह्म
- (B) yes — ब्रह्म and ब्रह्मा are perfectly interchangeable
- (C) yes — both mean 'a priest' anyway
- (D) no, because ब्रह्म means 'a fox' and cannot create

18. सर्वशक्तिमान् is built from सर्व + शक्ति + -मत् (with -मान् as the masculine nominative singular form of -मत्). The whole word therefore most precisely means:

- (A) '(the one) lacking all power' — i.e. powerless
- (B) 'all the separate powers, listed one by one'
- (C) '(the one) possessing all power' — i.e. omnipotent
- (D) 'the power that belongs to everyone equally'

19. Why does -मान् appear in सर्वशक्तिमान् rather than -वान् (as in भगवान्)?

- (A) -मान् marks the future tense, -वान् the past tense
- (B) -मान् means 'lacking', -वान् means 'possessing'
- (C) after a stem ending in -इ/-उ (here शक्ति-), the possessive suffix takes the -मत्/-मान् form; -वत्/-वान् attaches elsewhere
- (D) the two are identical; the writer simply chose -मान् at random

20. बुद्धिमान्, धनवान् and शक्तिमान् share a common grammatical feature. It is that each:

- (A) is a future-tense verb formed with -स्य-
- (B) is in the instrumental case meaning 'by means of'
- (C) negates the quality, meaning 'lacking intelligence/wealth/power'
- (D) adds the possessive -मत्/-वत् suffix to a quality-noun, meaning 'possessing that quality'

21. A student translates सर्वशक्तिमान् as 'one who owns many machines'. The grammatical mistake is that the suffix -मत्/-मान् marks:

- (A) the plural number, hence 'many machines'
- (B) the past tense, hence 'owned'
- (C) possession of a QUALITY (all-power), not ownership of countable objects
- (D) the dative case, hence 'for the machines'

22. Which pair correctly contrasts the meaning of the -मत् suffix with the form that would NEGATE the quality?

- (A) शक्तिमान् = 'powerless'; शक्तिहीनः = 'powerful'
 (B) शक्तिमान् = 'future power'; अशक्तः = 'past power'
 (C) शक्तिमान् and शक्तिहीनः both mean 'possessing power'
 (D) शक्तिमान् = 'possessing power'; the negation would be अशक्तः / शक्तिहीनः = 'powerless'

23. Combining the verse and the epithet: ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् + सर्वशक्तिमान् ईश्वरः together portray a Lord who is:

- (A) present everywhere but powerless
 (B) present everywhere (all-pervading) AND possessing all power (omnipotent)
 (C) all-powerful but confined to one temple (D) neither present anywhere nor powerful

24. The three honouring-terms are आराधनम् (worship), ध्यानम् (meditation), नामकीर्तनम् (Name-chanting). Which describes an OUTWARD vocal act, and which describes a SILENT inward act?

- (A) नामकीर्तनम् is vocal (singing/chanting the Name); ध्यानम् is silent inward meditation
 (B) ध्यानम् is vocal chanting; नामकीर्तनम् is silent
 (C) both आराधनम् and ध्यानम् are vocal; नामकीर्तनम् is silent
 (D) all three are silent

25. नामकीर्तनम् splits as नाम + कीर्तनम्. If कीर्तनम् means 'praise-singing', then the whole compound most precisely means:

- (A) singing/proclaiming the Name in praise (B) a stain on the family name
 (C) the worship of an idol with offerings (D) silent meditation on a name

26. A passage says बुद्धिमन्तः जनाः ईश्वरम् आराधनेन ध्यानेन नामकीर्तनेन च स्मरन्ति. The three -एन endings on आराधन/ध्यान/नामकीर्तन are in the instrumental and tell us these are:

- (A) the objects that the wise worship instead of the Lord
 (B) the places where the Lord is found
 (C) the MEANS by which the wise remember the Lord
 (D) the recipients to whom the wise give the Lord

27. Change ध्यानेन (instrumental, 'by meditation') into the plain naming form (nominative). The result is:

- (A) ध्याने (B) ध्यानाय
 (C) ध्यानम् (D) ध्यानात्

28. आराधनम् ('worship') most broadly covers the act of honouring the Lord. How does it relate to the narrower terms ध्यानम् and नामकीर्तनम्?

- (A) आराधनम् means the same as कुलकलङ्कः, so it is a kind of disgrace
 (B) आराधनम् is the general act of worship, of which ध्यानम् (meditation) and नामकीर्तनम् (Name-chanting) are particular forms
 (C) आराधनम् is a future-tense verb, while ध्यानम् and नामकीर्तनम् are nouns
 (D) आराधनम् is the opposite of worship, so the wise avoid it

29. Why is the instrumental (not the accusative) the right case for ध्यान and नामकीर्तन in 'the wise remember God BY meditation and Name-chanting'?

- (A) because they are the direct objects being remembered
- (B) because they are the agents doing the remembering
- (C) because they name the place where God lives
- (D) because they are the instrument/means of the action, while God is the accusative object of स्मरन्ति

30. A devotee chants the Lord's Name aloud while another sits in silent contemplation. The two acts are named, respectively:

- (A) ध्यानम् and नामकीर्तनम्
- (B) आराधनम् and कुलकलङ्कः
- (C) दास्यन्ति and ध्यायन्ति
- (D) नामकीर्तनम् and ध्यानम्

31. यक्ष, गन्धर्व and किन्नर are grouped together in the chapter because all three are:

- (A) asuras (anti-gods) who war against the देवs
- (B) upa-deva (semi-divine beings) ranking below the देवs
- (C) supreme देवs above all other beings
- (D) ordinary humans with special jobs

32. In the hierarchy देव → upa-deva → मनुष्य → असुर, a गन्धर्व stands directly:

- (A) below the देवs but above ordinary humans
- (B) above the देवs
- (C) below ordinary humans
- (D) at the very bottom, below the असुरs in moral rank

33. A student writes 'किन्नरः is a full god, higher than इन्द्रः (a देव)'. The correction is:

- (A) किन्नरः is correct; he outranks all देवs
- (B) किन्नरः is an असुर, an enemy of the gods
- (C) किन्नरः is semi-divine (upa-deva), ranking BELOW the देवs such as इन्द्रः
- (D) किन्नरः is an ordinary human

34. Which set lists ONLY semi-divine beings (no full god, no human, no animal)?

- (A) ब्रह्मा, गन्धर्वः, किन्नरः
- (B) यक्षः, गन्धर्वः, किन्नरः
- (C) यक्षः, चिकित्सकः, किन्नरः
- (D) गन्धर्वः, शृगालः, यक्षः

35. Naming a whole hierarchy — देव, upa-deva, मनुष्य, असुर — all as 'pervaded by the Lord' supports the verse's claim that:

- (A) only the देवs are pervaded; lower beings are excluded
- (B) the Lord pervades every tier of beings, high and low alike
- (C) only humans are pervaded; the rest are outside the Lord
- (D) no beings are pervaded; only inert matter is

36. The chapter ranks beings to teach a religious point. The point is best stated as:

- (A) the cosmos is an ordered hierarchy of beings, yet all of it rests within the one all-pervading Lord
- (B) the cosmos is chaos with no ranks and no Lord

(C) only the top of the hierarchy is real; the rest is illusion

(D) each tier has its own separate lord, so there are many lords

37. दास्यन्ति contains the marker -स्य-. Identifying that marker tells you the tense is _____, and the gloss दानं करिष्यन्ति confirms it because करिष्यन्ति also carries the same -स्य- (as -ष्य-).

(A) present — 'they are giving'

(B) future (लृट्-लकार) — 'they shall give'

(C) past — 'they gave'

(D) imperative — 'let them give'

38. दास्यन्ति parses as दा (root, 'give') + स्य (future) + अन्ति (3rd person plural ending). The closest English is:

(A) 'he will give'

(B) 'they were giving'

(C) 'you will give'

(D) 'they will give'

39. If you wanted to say 'they are giving NOW' instead of दास्यन्ति, you would use:

(A) दास्यन्ति

(B) अदुः

(C) ददति (or ददते)

(D) देयम्

40. Which single change converts the future दास्यन्ति into a singular subject while keeping the future meaning?

(A) use ददति — 'they give'

(B) use दास्यति — 'he/she will give'

(C) use अदात् — 'he gave'

(D) use दीयते — 'it is given'

41. A student claims दास्यन्ति and ददति differ only in spelling, not meaning. The correct response is:

(A) they differ in tense — दास्यन्ति is future ('will give'), ददति is present ('give now') — due to the -स्य- marker

(B) correct; both mean 'they give now' (C) they differ only in number; one is singular

(D) they differ only in person; one is 2nd person

42. Glossing दास्यन्ति as दानं करिष्यन्ति ('they will do the giving') is a teaching device that:

(A) changes the tense from future to present (B) shows that दास्यन्ति is actually past tense

(C) proves दास्यन्ति is an imperative command

(D) restates the future verb using a more familiar future helper, confirming the -स्य- future in both

43. ध्यायन्ति parses to the root ध्यै ('to meditate') + present-tense plural ending. It therefore means:

(A) 'they meditate' (present)

(B) 'they will meditate' (future)

(C) 'they gave' (past)

(D) 'they sleep' (present)

44. Match the action to the verb: a group sits in silent contemplation of the Lord. The verb is:

(A) विवदन्ते ('they quarrel')

(B) स्वपन्ति ('they sleep')

(C) ध्यायन्ति ('they meditate')

(D) दास्यन्ति ('they will give')

45. Which verb is in a DIFFERENT tense from the other three?

- (A) ध्यायन्ति (B) ददति
(C) दास्यन्ति (D) स्वपन्ति

46. कुलकलङ्कः splits as कुल ('family') + कलङ्क ('stain'). Read as a whole, the most precise sense is:

- (A) the highest honour a family can earn
(B) a person whose conduct brings disgrace on his family
(C) a worship ritual performed by the family
(D) a semi-divine being who protects the family

47. कुलकलङ्कः is moral vocabulary. Within the chapter's ethic of seeing the Lord in all, it warns specifically against:

- (A) honouring the Lord by meditation
(B) conduct so shameful that it dishonours one's own family
(C) treating the world with reverence (D) singing the Name of the Lord

48. Which word is the moral OPPOSITE of कुलकलङ्कः in the chapter's value-scheme?

- (A) a more shameful relative who disgraces the family worse
(B) a reverent, worshipful person who honours the all-pervading Lord
(C) a fox (शृगालः) (D) a future-tense verb (दास्यन्ति)

49. Which row matches EVERY item correctly?

- (A) आराधनम् = meditation; ध्यानम् = Name-chanting; नामकीर्तनम् = worship
(B) आराधनम् = a family-stain; ध्यानम् = worship; नामकीर्तनम् = meditation
(C) आराधनम् = worship; ध्यानम् = meditation; नामकीर्तनम् = Name-chanting
(D) आराधनम् = future tense; ध्यानम् = a god; नामकीर्तनम् = a fox

50. Which grammar statement is fully correct?

- (A) दास्यन्ति is present, and -मत् means 'lacking'
(B) दास्यन्ति is past, and -वत् is a dative ending
(C) the -स्य- in दास्यन्ति is the possessive suffix, and -मत् marks the future
(D) दास्यन्ति is future (the -स्य- marker), and -मत्/-वत् is the possessive suffix ('possessing')

51. Which 'three Brahmas' row is fully correct?

- (A) ब्रह्म = a priest; ब्रह्मन् = the Absolute; ब्रह्मा = a fox
(B) ब्रह्म = the creator-god; ब्रह्मन् = the Absolute; ब्रह्मा = a priest
(C) all three = the impersonal Absolute
(D) ब्रह्म (neuter) = the Absolute; ब्रह्मन् = a priest; ब्रह्मा = the creator-god

52. Which being-classification row is fully correct?

- (A) गन्धर्वः = a full god; ब्रह्मा = semi-divine; शृगालः = a human
(B) किन्नरः = an asura; यक्षः = a human; ब्रह्मा = a fox

(C) गन्धर्वः = semi-divine; ब्रह्मा = a (creator) god; शृगालः = an animal

(D) यक्षः = the supreme god; गन्धर्वः = a doctor; किन्नरः = a god

53. A student's answer sheet says: 'सर्वशक्तिमान् = lacking power; दास्यन्ति = past; ब्रह्मा = the Absolute.' How many of the three claims are wrong?

(A) none — all three are correct

(B) all three are wrong

(C) exactly one is wrong

(D) exactly two are wrong

54. The chapter pairs a metaphysical verse with grammar drills. Which grammar topics does it actually foreground?

(A) the future tense (दास्यन्ति, -स्य-), the possessive -मत्/-वत् suffix, and the gender-distinguished Brahma trio

(B) only the six tastes and the seasons (C) only direction-words ending in -तः

(D) only the rules of euphonic combination of numerals

55. Seeing the Lord in everything, the chapter's wise person responds with worship, meditation and Name-chanting. The OPPOSITE response the chapter implicitly rejects is:

(A) humble worship of the Lord

(B) silent meditation on the Lord

(C) arrogance, greed and quarrelling toward the world

(D) joyful chanting of the Lord's Name

56. Reading the whole chapter, which one-sentence summary is most accurate?

(A) The all-pervading, all-powerful Lord fills the whole world, and the wise honour Him through worship, meditation and Name-chanting rather than greed or arrogance

(B) A fox loses its tail and persuades others to cut theirs

(C) A merchant learns the rules of barter and money

(D) The kings of a region build forts to defend their land

57. Why does calling the chapter merely 'a grammar lesson on tenses' miss its point?

(A) the grammar (future tense, -मत् suffix, the Brahma trio) is taught in service of understanding the verse's claim that the Lord pervades and rules all

(B) the chapter has no grammar at all, only a story

(C) the chapter is about a fox, not God

(D) the grammar contradicts the verse's meaning

58. Integrating verse + epithet + ethics: a person who hoards wealth, scorns others, and shames his family is, in the chapter's terms, BEST described as one who:

(A) honours the सर्वशक्तिमान् Lord through नामकीर्तनम्

(B) is an upa-deva attending the gods (C) practises ध्यानम् on the neuter ब्रह्म

(D) ignores the all-pervading Lord and acts as a कुलकलङ्कः (a stain on the family)

59. The verse says the Lord pervades इदं सर्वम् ('all this'). If a believer truly internalises this, the chapter expects his daily conduct to show:

- (A) reverence only inside a temple, and indifference outside it
- (B) worship of semi-divine beings in place of the Lord
- (C) the conviction that since the Lord acts, humans need do nothing
- (D) reverent care for all things and beings, expressed through worship, meditation and Name-chanting

60. Final synthesis: which statement correctly combines a meaning, a grammar fact, and the chapter's ethic without error?

- (A) ईशावास्यम् = 'godless'; दास्यन्ति = past; so the wise hoard wealth
- (B) इदं सर्वम् = 'one temple'; सर्वशक्तिमान् = 'powerless'; so the Lord is weak and local
- (C) ब्रह्मा = the Absolute; ध्यानेन = nominative; so meditation is the subject of the sentence
- (D) ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् = 'all this is pervaded by the Lord'; दास्यन्ति is future ('they shall give'); therefore the wise give and worship rather than hoard

Worked Solutions

1. (C) The gloss ईश्वरेण व्याप्तम् puts ईश्वर in the instrumental (-एण), marking the agent BY WHOM the pervading is done; इदं सर्वम् is the thing pervaded. So the Lord pervades all, not the reverse. The reading that the Lord is the object reverses agent and patient. Treating the instrumental as a place (locative sense) or as a recipient (dative sense) mistakes the case entirely.

2. (A) सर्वम् means 'all / the whole', and the verse says all this is pervaded by the Lord; the chapter draws the ethical lesson that one should therefore treat the world with reverence, not grab it greedily. The 'half' reading mistranslates सर्वम्. इदम् means 'this' (the present world), not 'the next world'. The verse is not temple-restricted — its whole point is everywhere-pervasion.

3. (D) ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् teaches that the Lord pervades ALL this, so reverence is owed everywhere, not only to consecrated idols. The 'only idols' option re-imposes the very confinement the verse denies. 'Sky-only' contradicts the all-pervasion. 'Neither matters' inverts the lesson from reverence to dismissal.

4. (B) The chapter shows that getting the verse's meaning depends on parsing it right — knowing ईश is 'Lord' (root ईश्) and सर्वम् is 'all'. So grammar serves comprehension. The verse is a revered, well-formed Upanishadic line, not erroneous. It is meaning-rich, not meaningless. The pairing is deliberate, not accidental.

5. (C) इदम् ('this') + सर्वम् ('all') + ईशावास्यम् ('pervaded by the Lord') together mean 'all this is pervaded/enveloped by the Lord'. The 'single thing' reading drops सर्वम् ('all'). 'Abandoned' and 'no connection' both reverse the verse's claim of intimate, total presence.

6. (A) The chapter draws a reverence-and-care lesson FROM all-pervasion: if the Lord is in everything, everything deserves respect. 'Removes all duty' inverts this into licence. 'Only in temples' contradicts the verse's everywhere-claim. 'World is unreal' is not the chapter's lesson — the lesson is responsible reverence, not nihilism.

7. (A) The root ईश् means 'to rule, to own', so derivatives ईश and ईश्वर name the RULER/owner — the Lord. 'One who is ruled' reverses agent and patient. 'One who eats' uses an unrelated root. 'A palace' would be a place-noun, not the agent-sense both these words carry.

8. (D) ईश is an independent Sanskrit word meaning 'Lord', from the root ईश् ('to rule'); English '-ish' is a suffix meaning 'resembling/somewhat'. The resemblance is purely phonetic. 'Both mean somewhat-like' is false — ईश names the Supreme. ईश is a noun, not a suffix. '-ish' has Germanic, not Sanskrit, origin.

9. (C) The root ईश् 'to rule' yields ईश and ईश्वर, both meaning the ruling Lord. शृगाल (fox), घट (pot) and their supposed chains are unrelated to ईश्. ईश does not mean 'student' — that would be छात्र; ईश is the Lord, the ruler.

10. (B) ईश means 'Lord' (root ईश्), and the fox is शृगालः — so calling ईश a fox is the first error. वास्य(म्) carries the 'to be pervaded/dwelt-in' sense (cf. gloss व्याप्तम्), so dropping it is the second. The 'reading is fine' option ignores both errors. Reading ईश as 'fox' is never correct.

11. (A) ईश्वर is derived from the root ईश् ('to rule'), and the Lord is the one who rules all — so the first sentence is internally consistent. 'From the word for fox' and 'from the root for pot' invent false etymologies. Calling ईश्वर an English suffix repeats the '-ish' error; it is a Sanskrit noun.

12. (A) Correct: ब्रह्म (neuter) = the Absolute; ब्रह्मन् (masc.) = a priest; ब्रह्मा (masc.) = the creator-god. The student's set assigns creator-god to ब्रह्म (should be Absolute), Absolute to ब्रह्मन् (should be priest), and priest to ब्रह्मा (should be creator-god) — every one is wrong, so zero match.

13. (D) Sanskrit distinguishes these by gender/stem: neuter ब्रह्म (Absolute), masculine ब्रह्मन् (priest), masculine ब्रह्मा (creator-god) — gender and form carry the meaning. Tone of voice does not encode meaning here. They are NOT spelled identically. 'Time of day' is irrelevant to gender-based distinction.

14. (D) The all-pervading impersonal Supreme is the neuter ब्रह्म, which the verse's ईश names. ब्रह्मन् is a priest (a person, not the Absolute). ब्रह्मा is the personal creator-god, not the impersonal pervader. 'A fox' (शृगाल) is unrelated.

15. (B) A priest is ब्रह्मन्, a masculine word. ब्रह्म is neuter (the Absolute), not a priest. ब्रह्मा is the creator-god and is masculine, not neuter. ब्रह्म is neuter, never masculine.

16. (B) Impersonal Absolute = neuter ब्रह्म; personal creator-god = ब्रह्मा; ritual priest = ब्रह्मन्. So the order is ब्रह्म, ब्रह्मा, ब्रह्मन्. The other orderings swap at least one role — e.g. the last option puts ब्रह्मन् as creator-god and ब्रह्मा as priest, both wrong.

17. (A) The active creating of the world is attributed to the personal creator-god ब्रह्मा; the neuter ब्रह्म is the impersonal Absolute, so substituting it changes the meaning. They are NOT interchangeable. Neither means 'a priest' (that is ब्रह्मन्). ब्रह्म is the Absolute, not a fox.

18. (C) सर्व 'all' + शक्ति 'power' + the possessive suffix -म्/-मान् = 'possessing all power', i.e. omnipotent. -म् marks possession, never lack, so 'powerless' is the opposite. The suffix denotes possession of a QUALITY, not an enumerated list of gadgets, and it does not mean a power shared by everyone.

19. (C) -म्/-वत् ('possessing') has the variants -म्/-मान् and -वत्/-वान्; after stems like शक्ति (ending in -इ) the -म- form is used (शक्तिम्/शक्तिमान्), while भगवत्/भगवान् takes the -व- form. Both forms still mean 'possessing'. Neither marks tense. They are not freely interchangeable here — the stem's ending governs the choice.

20. (D) बुद्धि+म् ('intelligent'), धन+वत् ('wealthy'), शक्ति+म् ('powerful') all add the possessive -म्/-वत् suffix to a quality-noun, meaning 'possessing' it. They are nouns/adjectives, not -स्य- future verbs. They are not instrumental case-forms. The suffix affirms, never negates, the quality.

21. (C) -म्/-वत् attaches to a quality-noun (शक्ति, 'power') and means 'having that quality' — here all-power, omnipotence. It does not pluralise into 'many objects'. It is a possessive suffix, not a tense marker, so 'owned' (past) is wrong. It is not a case-ending, so 'for the machines' (dative) is wrong.

22. (D) शक्तिमान् with the possessive -म् means 'possessing power'; the opposite 'powerless' uses negation (अ-) or -हीन ('without'): अशक्तः, शक्तिहीनः. The first distractor flips both meanings. -म् is not a tense marker. शक्तिमान् and शक्तिहीनः are opposites, not synonyms.

23. (B) The verse gives all-pervasion (everywhere) and सर्वशक्तिमान् gives all-power (omnipotence) — so together: everywhere AND all-powerful. 'Powerless' contradicts सर्वशक्तिमान् (which means 'possessing all power'). 'Confined to one temple' contradicts the verse's all-pervasion. 'Neither' denies both.

24. (A) नामकीर्तनम् = नाम ('Name') + कीर्तनम् ('praise-singing'), an outward vocal act. ध्यानम् is silent inward meditation. The first distractor swaps the two. आराधनम् is worship generally, not specifically vocal, and नामकीर्तनम् is precisely the vocal one — so 'all silent' is wrong.

25. (A) नाम ('Name') + कीर्तनम् ('praise-singing') = singing/proclaiming the Name in praise. 'A stain on the family name' confuses it with कुलकलङ्कः. 'Worship with offerings' is आराधनम्. 'Silent meditation' is ध्यानम् — but कीर्तनम् is vocal, not silent.

26. (C) The instrumental (-एन) marks the MEANS/instrument: the wise remember the Lord BY worship, meditation and Name-chanting. The Lord (ईश्वरम्, accusative) is the object remembered, not these three. They are not places (that would be locative) nor recipients (dative).

27. (C) ध्यान is a neuter -अ stem; its nominative singular is ध्यानम्, while ध्यानेन is the instrumental. ध्याने is the locative ('in meditation'). ध्यानाय is the dative ('for meditation'). ध्यानात् is the ablative ('from meditation'). Only ध्यानम् is the nominative naming form.

28. (B) आराधनम् is worship in general; meditation (ध्यानम्) and Name-chanting (नामकीर्तनम्) are specific ways of worshipping — so the general includes the particular. आराधनम् is not कुलकलङ्कः (a family-stain). It is a noun, not a future verb. And it is worship itself, not its opposite — the wise practise it.

29. (D) स्मरन्ति ('they remember') takes God as its accusative object; meditation and Name-chanting are the MEANS, so they take the instrumental. They are not the objects remembered (that is God). The agents are the wise people (nominative बुद्धिमन्तः जनाः), not the practices. They are not a place (locative).

30. (D) Chanting aloud = नामकीर्तनम् (vocal Name-praise); silent contemplation = ध्यानम् (meditation). The first distractor reverses the order. कुलकलङ्कः is 'a stain on the family', not a worship act. दास्यन्ति/ध्यायन्ति are verbs ('will give'/'meditate'), not the names of the two acts asked for.

31. (B) यक्ष, गन्धर्व and किन्नर are upa-deva — semi-divine attendants of the gods, ranking BELOW the देवs. They are not asuras (anti-gods), not supreme देवs, and not ordinary humans; they form the semi-divine tier of the hierarchy.

32. (A) गन्धर्व is an upa-deva (semi-divine), so it sits below the देवs yet above मनुष्य (humans) in the chapter's ranking. It is not above the देवs (they outrank it), not below humans, and the असुर/lowest position is a different tier from the semi-divine.

33. (C) किन्नरः is an upa-deva (semi-divine), so it ranks below the देव — it does not outrank इन्द्रः. It is not an असुर (anti-god) nor an ordinary human; it belongs to the semi-divine tier just under the gods.

34. (B) यक्ष, गन्धर्व, किन्नर are all semi-divine. The first distractor includes ब्रह्मा (a creator-GOD, not semi-divine). The second includes चिकित्सकः (a doctor, a human). The third includes शृगालः (a fox, an animal). Only the all-semi-divine set is correct.

35. (B) ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् says ALL this is pervaded, so every tier of beings — gods, semi-divine, humans, anti-gods — falls within the Lord. Excluding lower beings, or restricting pervasion to humans, or to inert matter only, all contradict the सर्वम् ('all') of the verse.

36. (A) The hierarchy (देव → upa-deva → मनुष्य → असुर) shows order, while ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम् places ALL of it within the single Lord. 'Chaos with no Lord' denies both order and pervasion. 'Only the top is real' is not the chapter's claim. 'Many separate lords' contradicts the one all-pervading ईश.

37. (B) The -स्य-/-ष्य- infix is the future-tense (लृट्) marker; दास्यन्ति and the gloss करिष्यन्ति both show it, so both are future: 'they shall give / shall do (the giving)'. Present 'they give' would be ददति/दत्ते. Past 'they gave' lacks -स्य-. The imperative 'let them give' (ददतु) is a different mood.

38. (D) दा + स्य (future) + अन्ति (3rd plural) = 'they will give'. The -अन्ति ending is plural, not singular, so 'he will give' (दास्यति) is wrong number. 'They were giving' is past-continuous, lacking the future -स्य-. 'You will give' would use a 2nd-person ending (दास्यथ/दास्यसि), not -अन्ति.

39. (C) Present 'they give / are giving' is ददति (parasmaipada) / ददते (atmanepada). दास्यन्ति is the FUTURE ('will give'). अदुः is a past form. देयम् is a gerundive ('to be given'), not a present-tense finite verb.

40. (B) दास्यति keeps the future -स्य- but uses the 3rd-singular ending -ति: 'he/she will give'. ददति is present and plural. अदात् is past singular ('he gave'). दीयते is a present passive ('it is given'), losing the future sense.

41. (A) The -स्य- in दास्यन्ति makes it future ('will give'); ददति is present ('give now') — so the difference is TENSE, not mere spelling. They do not both mean present. Both are 3rd-person plural (same number and person), so the number/person distractors are wrong.

42. (D) दानं करिष्यन्ति paraphrases दास्यन्ति with the familiar future करिष्यन्ति ('will do') — both carry the -स्य-/-ष्य- future marker, so the gloss confirms, not changes, the future tense. It does not turn the verb present, past, or imperative.

43. (A) ध्यायन्ति is from ध्यै ('meditate') with the present 3rd-plural ending, so 'they meditate'. There is no -स्य-, so it is not future ('will meditate' would be ध्यास्यन्ति). 'They gave'

is an unrelated verb (दा) in the past. 'They sleep' is स्वपन्ति, a different root.

44. (C) Silent contemplation of the Lord = ध्यायन्ति ('they meditate'). विवदन्ते is 'they quarrel'. स्वपन्ति is 'they sleep'. दास्यन्ति is the future 'they will give' — none of these is contemplation.

45. (C) दास्यन्ति is FUTURE (it carries the -स्य- marker, 'they will give'). ध्यायन्ति ('they meditate'), ददति ('they give'), and स्वपन्ति ('they sleep') are all PRESENT. So दास्यन्ति is the odd one out by tense.

46. (B) कुल ('family') + कलङ्क ('stain') = 'a stain on the family' — i.e. someone who disgraces it. It is the opposite of an honour. It is not a worship ritual (that would be आराधनम्) and not a semi-divine being (यक्ष/गन्धर्व/किन्नर).

47. (B) कुलकलङ्कः ('a stain on the family') warns against disgraceful conduct that dishonours one's family — the opposite of the reverent, worshipful behaviour the chapter praises. Meditation, reverence, and Name-singing are the GOOD responses the chapter commends, not what कुलकलङ्कः warns against.

48. (B) कुलकलङ्कः is one who disgraces the family; its moral opposite in the chapter is the reverent, worshipful person who honours the Lord present in all. A 'more shameful relative' is the same fault, worsened, not the opposite. A fox and a future-tense verb are not moral categories at all.

49. (C) Correct: आराधनम् = worship, ध्यानम् = meditation, नामकीर्तनम् = Name-chanting. The first distractor rotates all three meanings. The second mislabels आराधनम् as a family-stain (that is कुलकलङ्कः). The third assigns a tense, a god, and an animal — none of which these worship-terms mean.

50. (D) दास्यन्ति is future (its -स्य- marker), and -मत्/-वत् is the possessive ('possessing') suffix. The first distractor mislabels the tense and reverses the suffix's sense. The second mislabels the tense and confuses -वत् with a case-ending. The third swaps the roles of -स्य- (future) and -मत् (possessive).

51. (D) Correct gender-meaning set: neuter ब्रह्म = the Absolute, ब्रह्मन् = a priest, ब्रह्मा = the creator-god. The first distractor misassigns all three and adds 'fox' (शृगालः). The second rotates the roles. 'All three = the Absolute' erases the gender distinctions that give them different meanings.

52. (C) Correct: गन्धर्वः is semi-divine (upa-deva), ब्रह्मा is a creator-god, and शृगालः is an animal (a fox). The first distractor demotes ब्रह्मा and promotes गन्धर्वः wrongly. The second mislabels किन्नर/यक्ष and calls ब्रह्मा a fox. The third over-promotes यक्ष and miscalls गन्धर्व a doctor.

53. (B) सर्वशक्तिमान् = all-powerful (the -मत् suffix means 'possessing', not 'lacking'); दास्यन्ति = future (the -स्य- marker), not past; ब्रह्मा = the creator-god, not the Absolute (that is neuter

ब्रह्म). Every claim is wrong, so all three.

54. (A) The chapter's grammar focus is the future tense (दास्यन्ति), the possessive -मत्/-वत् suffix (सर्वशक्तिमान्), and the ब्रह्म/ब्रह्मन्/ब्रह्मा gender distinction. 'Six tastes/seasons', '-तः direction words', and 'numeral euphony' belong to other lessons, not this chapter.

55. (C) Because the Lord pervades all, the wise respond with reverent worship, meditation and Name-chanting; the rejected opposite is arrogance/greed/quarrelling (the कुलकलङ्क-type attitude). The other three options ARE the praised responses, not the rejected ones.

56. (A) The chapter's theme is the all-pervading (ईशावास्यम् इदं सर्वम्) and all-powerful (सर्वशक्तिमान्) Lord, honoured by the wise through आराधन/ध्यान/नामकीर्तन. The fox tale, barter/money lesson, and forts belong to entirely different chapters/subjects, not scho7.

57. (A) The chapter uses grammar (future दास्यन्ति, possessive -मत्, the ब्रह्म trio) to help students correctly read the metaphysical verse — meaning and grammar work together. It is not story-only, not about a fox, and the grammar supports rather than contradicts the verse.

58. (D) Hoarding, scorn and family-shame are the opposite of the chapter's reverence-ethic; such a person ignores the all-pervading Lord and is a कुलकलङ्क: ('a stain on the family'). He is NOT honouring the Lord (नामकीर्तनम्), nor a semi-divine being, nor a meditator on ब्रह्म — those are the praised, contrary descriptions.

59. (D) Internalising 'all this is pervaded by the Lord' yields reverent care everywhere, shown through आराधन/ध्यान/नामकीर्तन. Temple-only reverence contradicts the everywhere-pervasion. Worshipping semi-divine beings instead of the Lord inverts the hierarchy. 'Humans need do nothing' contradicts the active honouring the chapter prescribes.

60. (D) All three parts of the correct statement check out: the verse means 'all this is pervaded by the Lord', दास्यन्ति is future ('they shall give'), and the chapter's ethic favours giving/worship over hoarding. The first distractor mistranslates the verse and the tense. The second shrinks सर्वम् to one temple and calls the all-powerful Lord powerless. The third miscalls ब्रह्मा the Absolute and ध्यानेन (instrumental, 'by meditation') a nominative subject.
