Chapter	11 — द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः (The Andaman Islands)
Total Questions	60 (Multiple Choice, single correct)
Maximum Marks	240

Marking scheme: +4 for each correct answer · -1 for each wrong answer · 0 if unattempted.

Instructions: Each question has four options (A), (B), (C), (D); exactly one is correct.

Classic traps this paper: the title-sandhi द्वीपः + अण्डमानः → द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is विसर्ग-सन्धि giving ओ + अवग्रह (ऽ), NOT a dropped letter or a compound of 'two'; द्वीपेषु is सप्तमी बहुवचन (locative plural, 'among/in the islands'), not nominative; द्वि + अप् yields द्वीप by lengthening, so the इ becomes long ई — it is not अ + अ; सोढवान् is the क्तवतु past-active participle of root सह् (he-who-bore), agreeing in līṅga-vacana with Savarkar, NOT a finite future or the gerund सोढ्वा/-त्वा; दश वर्षाणि is नपुंसकलिङ्ग बहुवचन in the accusative of DURATION (for ten years), not a subject or instrument; कालापानी is the prison's NAME (exile over the seas), not a literal black river; कारागार (कारा 'cell' + गार/अगार 'house') is a prison, not the Hindi कारखाना 'factory'; जनजाति is a Scheduled/indigenous TRIBE, not सामान्यजन 'common folk'; the Sentinelese are uncontacted and law-protected, not extinct. Do not write on this paper — mark answers on your answer sheet.

1. The chapter's title word द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is formed by joining द्वीपः + अण्डमानः. Which sandhi operates, and what does the symbol ऽ mark?

- (A) स्वर-सन्धि (दीर्घ): the two अ's merge into a long आ, written आ
- (B) व्यञ्जन-सन्धि: the visarga turns into स् before अ, written स
- (C) गुण-सन्धि: अ + अण्ड gives ए, and ऽ marks a missing अनुस्वार
- (D) विसर्ग-सन्धि: अः before अ becomes ओ, and the following short अ is then elided, the elision marked by the अवग्रह (ऽ)

2. Read द्वीपोऽण्डमानः "backwards" (sandhi-viccheda). The two original words were:

- (A) द्वीपो and अण्डमानः (the ओ already belongs to the second word)
- (B) द्वीप and नण्डमानः (an न was lost at the join)

(C) द्वीपा and अण्डमानः (the first word ended in आ)(D) द्वीपः and अण्डमानः

3. If the same rule that made द्वीपः + अण्डमानः → द्वीपोऽण्डमानः were applied to रामः + अत्र, the result would be:

- (A) रामात्र (B) रामश्चत्र
(C) रामोऽत्र (D) रामोत्र (no S needed)

4. अण्डमानद्वीपः निकोबारद्वीपः च — the small च at the end signals which relationship between the two island-groups?

- (A) contrast ('but') — they are opposed
(B) coordination ('and') — both are named together as the territory's two island-groups
(C) possession — Nicobar belongs to Andaman
(D) doubt ('or') — only one of them exists

5. In the compound निकोबारद्वीपः, the second member द्वीपः carries the case ending while निकोबार is uninflected. This tells you निकोबारद्वीपः is best parsed as:

- (A) a द्वन्द्व compound meaning 'Nicobar and the island' (two separate things)
(B) a तत्पुरुष-type compound 'the Nicobar island', with द्वीप as the head noun taking the nominative singular
(C) a verb meaning 'Nicobar islands' (an action)
(D) two unrelated words that merely happen to be written together

6. The chapter places the Andamans बङ्गोपसागरे. Splitting बङ्गोपसागर = बङ्ग + उप + सागर, the most accurate sense is:

- (A) the Bengal mountain, since सागर can mean a peak
(B) the Bay of Bengal — the sea (सागर) near (उप) Bengal (बङ्ग)
(C) two Bengals, since उप doubles the word (D) the Bengal river, since सागर means a river

7. द्वीप is derived as द्वि + अप्. A student says 'द्वि + अप् should give द्व्यप् by yan-sandhi, so द्वीप is impossible.' The correct response is:

- (A) द्वीप is a fixed, traditionally-lengthened formation (the इ becomes long ई) preserved as a word — etymology explains the meaning ('water on two sides') even though the surface form is irregular
(B) the student is right; द्वीप must really be द्व्यप्
(C) द्वीप actually comes from द्व + ईप्, nothing to do with अप्
(D) the अप् is silent and never affected the form at all

8. Knowing द्वि = 'two' and अप् = 'water', which English geographical term shares the SAME morphological idea as द्वीप (land defined by surrounding water)?

- (A) 'continent', because it too is land
(B) 'archipelago', because it means a single rock
(C) 'island' / 'isle', and also 'peninsula' (paene + insula = 'almost an island')
(D) 'estuary', because it means two rivers

9. The word अप् ('water') survives as a hidden element in another Sanskrit word for a body of water. Which pairing keeps अप् meaningfully?

- (A) द्वीप (water on two sides) — अप् denotes the surrounding water
- (B) दीप (a lamp) — its प is the same अप्
- (C) पाप (sin) — it contains अप्
- (D) रूप (form) — its प is अप् 'water'

10. द्वीपः, द्वीपौ, द्वीपाः is the एकवचन–द्विवचन–बहुवचन series of which case, and how does it bear on the chapter's title द्वीपेषु?

- (A) It is the प्रथमा (nominative); द्वीपेषु is a DIFFERENT case — सप्तमी बहुवचन (locative plural, 'among the islands')
- (B) It is the सप्तमी; द्वीपेषु is its singular form
- (C) It is the द्वितीया; द्वीपेषु is its dual form
- (D) It is the तृतीया; द्वीपेषु means 'by the islands'

11. The title द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः means 'Among the islands, the Andaman is the lovely island.' The locative द्वीपेषु here expresses:

- (A) the set out of which one is singled out — the 'locative of among/within a group' (निर्धारण)
- (B) the place to which motion is directed ('towards the islands')
- (C) the instrument by which something is done ('with the islands')
- (D) the possessor of the islands ('the islands' owner')

12. In सावरकरः कारागारे दश वर्षाणि कष्टम् असोढत्/सोढवान्, identify the case of दश वर्षाणि and why.

- (A) प्रथमा (nominative) — 'ten years' is the subject doing the bearing
- (B) द्वितीया (accusative), neuter plural — the 'accusative of extent of time' (for ten years)
- (C) सप्तमी (locative) — 'in the tenth year'
- (D) तृतीया (instrumental) — 'by means of ten years'

13. वर्षाणि (in दश वर्षाणि) is the नपुंसकलिङ्ग form. The matching one–two–many series for the neuter noun वर्ष in this case is:

- (A) वर्षः – वर्षौ – वर्षाः
- (B) वर्षा – वर्षे – वर्षाः
- (C) वर्षम् – वर्षे – वर्षाणि
- (D) वर्षम् – वर्षौ – वर्षानि

14. कारागारे (as in 'in the prison') shows which विभक्ति, and the correct एक-द्वि-बहु of that case for the neuter कारागार is:

- (A) तृतीया (instrumental); कारागारेण – कारागाराभ्याम् – कारागारैः
- (B) सप्तमी (locative); कारागारे – कारागारयोः – कारागारेषु
- (C) षष्ठी (genitive); कारागारस्य – कारागारयोः – कारागाराणाम्
- (D) पञ्चमी (ablative); कारागारात् – कारागाराभ्याम् – कारागारेभ्यः

15. अण्डमानद्वीपः भारतस्य अस्ति — the word भारतस्य is in the षष्ठी. What relationship does it express here?

- (A) origin/separation — the island came FROM India
- (B) belonging/possession — the Andaman island IS India's (a territory of India)

- (C) location — the island is IN India's interior
(D) instrument — the island was made BY India

16. प्रवालप्रस्तरैः ('with/of coral reefs') in a description of the islands' beauty is in the तृतीया बहुवचन. The एक-द्वि-बहु of this instrumental for the masculine प्रस्तर is:

- (A) प्रस्तरः – प्रस्तरौ – प्रस्तराः (B) प्रस्तरेण – प्रस्तराभ्याम् – प्रस्तरैः
(C) प्रस्तरे – प्रस्तरयोः – प्रस्तरेषु (D) प्रस्तरम् – प्रस्तरौ – प्रस्तरान्

17. सोढवान् is built from the root सह् with the suffix क्तवतु. What part of speech does क्तवतु form, and what is its core meaning?

- (A) a past active participle ('having borne / he who bore') — it describes the agent who has completed the action
(B) a future tense finite verb ('he will bear')
(C) a passive past participle of the object ('that which was borne')
(D) an indeclinable gerund ('after bearing', like -त्वा forms)

18. The root सह् ('to bear/endure') gives the past-participle stem सोढ before -वान्. The change ह् → ढ in सोढ is an example of:

- (A) a spelling mistake; it should be सहवान्
(B) internal sandhi — the root-final aspirate combines with the suffix's त to give the retroflex ढ (a regular sound change in forming सोढ)
(C) reduplication of the root सह्
(D) addition of an extra root meaning 'ten' (from दश)

19. In सावरकरः ... सोढवान्, the participle सोढवान् ends in -वान् (masc.). If the chapter instead praised a woman freedom-fighter (वीराङ्गना) who bore the same suffering, the correct form would be:

- (A) सोढवान् (unchanged, participles never inflect for gender)
(B) सोढवांसः (the plural form) (C) सोढ्वा (the gerund, used for any gender)
(D) सोढवती (feminine of the क्तवतु participle)

20. Which sentence uses सोढवान् correctly with proper agreement?

- (A) सावरकरः कष्टं सोढवान् — 'Savarkar bore the suffering' (masc. sg. subject, masc. sg. participle)
(B) सावरकराः कष्टं सोढवान् — a plural subject with a singular participle
(C) सीता कष्टं सोढवान् — a feminine subject with a masculine participle
(D) सावरकरः कष्टं सोढ्वा — using the gerund as the main verb

21. सोढवान् दश वर्षाणि घोरं कष्टम् describes a completed endurance. Choosing सोढवान् (past active participle) over a present-tense verb सहते emphasises that the suffering was:

- (A) fully undergone and completed in the past — a finished, historical act of endurance
(B) still going on right now, in the present (C) going to happen in the future
(D) merely hypothetical and never actually borne

22. Match the meaning to सोढवान्. A teacher writes four glosses; only ONE is right:

- (A) 'he who crossed over' (from a root meaning to cross)
- (B) 'he who counted' (from a root meaning to count)
- (C) 'he who was drowned' (from a root meaning to sink)
- (D) 'he who endured / bore' — agent of a completed bearing

23. त्रितलात्मकम् कारागारम् describes the Cellular Jail. Breaking त्रितलात्मकम् = त्रि + तल + आत्मक, the precise sense is:

- (A) 'having three storeys for its body/nature' — a three-storeyed (three-tiered) building
- (B) 'made of three coral tiles' (C) 'holding three prisoners only'
- (D) 'three centuries old'

24. The jail is called 'Cellular' and Sanskrit keeps the English loanword. The best reason, drawn from the chapter's logic, is that:

- (A) Sanskrit grammar forbids any compound for 'cell', so a loanword was unavoidable
- (B) 'Cellular' is actually an old Sanskrit word रे-spelt in English letters
- (C) the design — one isolated cell per prisoner to block communication — has no single native Sanskrit term, so the borrowed word names that specific architecture
- (D) the British ordered that only English words be used in the text

25. Why did the cell-by-cell ('Cellular') design make the prison especially cruel for freedom-fighters like Savarkar?

- (A) it forced all prisoners into one crowded hall together
- (B) it gave each prisoner a private garden and more freedom
- (C) solitary isolation in separate cells cut prisoners off from one another, preventing communication, mutual support and organising
- (D) it was built of coral, which is poisonous to humans

26. The Cellular Jail was built by the British (आङ्ग्लैः) to imprison Indian freedom-fighters. Placing this in the chapter's larger picture, the islands hold together which two opposite faces?

- (A) ancient temple architecture AND modern industry
- (B) serene natural beauty (sand, coral, palms) AND a grim colonial history of imprisonment and sacrifice
- (C) snow-capped mountains AND desert dunes
- (D) a great river system AND a busy trading port

27. A timeline mixes facts. Which sequence is consistent with the chapter?

- (A) the Mughals built the jail → the British freed all prisoners → the islands became part of Sri Lanka
- (B) the British built the Cellular Jail → freedom-fighters like Savarkar were exiled there → after independence India protects the islands and their tribes, now UNESCO-recognised

(C) Indian kings built the jail for tourists → the British turned it into a school → it is now a factory

(D) the tribes built the jail → Savarkar ruled the islands → the British listed it on UNESCO

28. कालापानी literally reads as काल ('black') + पानी ('water'). The chapter's point is that taking it literally MISSES that:

(A) there really is a black-coloured river on the islands

(B) the sea around the islands is genuinely black

(C) कालापानी is the dreaded NAME of the Cellular Jail / the exile across the seas — a symbolic name, not a description of a black-coloured river

(D) the prisoners were forced to drink black water

29. काल can mean both 'black' and 'time/death'. Which nuance enriches कालापानी as a name for exile to the Andamans?

(A) both — the 'black water' evoked dark, deadly seas, and काल's sense of death/doom deepened the dread of a one-way exile

(B) only 'time', meaning the prisoners served fixed short terms

(C) only a colour, with no further overtone of danger

(D) neither; काल here is unrelated to black or to death

30. Why is कालापानी a more emotionally loaded name for the prison than a plain word like कारागारम्?

(A) it simply means a smaller, more comfortable jail

(B) it refers only to the colour of the prison walls

(C) it is the name the prisoners themselves chose with pride

(D) it names not just a building but the terror of being shipped across the seas into isolation, far from home and possibly forever

31. A tourist brochure writes: 'कालापानी — visit India's beautiful Black River resort!' What is wrong, per the chapter?

(A) कालापानी is not a river or resort at all; it is the name for the Cellular Jail and the agony of exile — a place of memory, not leisure

(B) nothing is wrong; कालापानी is indeed a riverside resort

(C) only the spelling is wrong; the meaning 'river resort' is fine

(D) the colour is wrong; the river is actually blue, not black

32. कारागारम् = कारा + (अ)गार. Match each part to its meaning to confirm 'prison':

(A) कारा = 'work', गार = 'place' → 'workplace' = factory

(B) कारा = 'confinement/cell', गार/अगार = 'house' → 'house of confinement' = prison

(C) कारा = 'black', गार = 'water' → 'black water' = कालापानी

(D) कारा = 'two', गार = 'water' → 'two-watered' = island

33. The Hindi word कारखाना sounds close to Sanskrit कारागार but means the opposite kind of building. The safest way to keep them apart is to remember:

- (A) they are exact synonyms, so it does not matter which you use
- (B) कारागार contains कारा 'confinement' (a place that holds people IN — a prison); कारखाना contains काम/कार 'work' (a place where goods are MADE — a factory)
- (C) कारागार is the factory and कारखाना is the prison
- (D) both mean 'island', so neither relates to a prison or factory

34. In context, सावरकरः कारागारे ... सोढवान् confirms कारागार means 'prison' rather than anything else, because the surrounding words describe:

- (A) machines, wages and manufactured goods — fitting a factory
- (B) books, shelves and quiet reading — fitting a library
- (C) prayers, idols and offerings — fitting a temple
- (D) ten years of imprisonment and unimaginable suffering borne for the Motherland — only a prison fits this

35. Suppose the chapter said सावरकरः कारागारात् मुक्तः अभवत्. The form कारागारात् adds which sense to 'prison'?

- (A) locative 'in the prison' — he stayed inside
- (B) instrumental 'by the prison' — the prison freed itself
- (C) ablative 'from the prison' — he became freed FROM the prison
- (D) genitive 'of the prison' — he owned the prison

36. स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः सावरकरः ... मातृभूमेः स्वातन्त्र्याय कष्टम् असोढत्. The dative-like स्वातन्त्र्याय expresses that the suffering was borne:

- (A) BECAUSE OF freedom that already existed
- (B) BY MEANS OF freedom as a tool
- (C) IN a place called freedom
- (D) FOR the sake of (the Motherland's) freedom — purpose/goal

37. मातृभूमि ('Motherland') is a compound मातृ + भूमि. The chapter's repeated use of मातृभूमि for India frames Savarkar's sacrifice as:

- (A) loyalty to his own birth-mother as a private family duty
- (B) devotion to the land revered as a mother — patriotism cast in the warmth of family love
- (C) service to the British crown that ruled the land
- (D) attachment to a piece of farmland he personally owned

38. स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः = स्वातन्त्र्य + वीरः. Why is this an apt epithet (विशेषण) for Savarkar in the chapter?

- (A) it means 'hero OF freedom' — one whose heroism is shown by suffering for the nation's independence, exactly what the chapter narrates
- (B) it means 'a freely wandering soldier' with no particular cause

(C) it means 'a hero who loved his own freedom' selfishly

(D) it means 'a free man who was never imprisoned'

39. कल्पनातीतं घोरं कष्टम् uses three words to weight the suffering. कल्पनातीत = कल्पना + अतीत means:

(A) 'imaginary' — existing only in fancy, not real

(B) 'before imagining' — anticipated in advance

(C) 'beyond imagination' — surpassing what one can even conceive (अतीत = 'gone beyond')

(D) 'a kind of imagination' — merely thought about

40. Putting घोरं कष्टम् with दश वर्षाणि and मातृभूमे: स्वातन्त्र्याय, the chapter's portrait of Savarkar is meant to evoke in the student:

(A) pity for a man who made a foolish, pointless choice

(B) amusement at an exaggerated adventure tale

(C) envy of the comforts he enjoyed in the jail

(D) reverence and gratitude for sacrifice and endurance in the cause of national freedom

41. Which single statement about Savarkar is fully consistent with the chapter (every clause true)?

(A) A freedom-hero who, for the Motherland's independence, bore unimaginable suffering in the Cellular Jail (कालापानी) for ten years

(B) A poet who wrote for ten days in a comfortable Andaman library, then sailed home

(C) A British officer who built the jail and counted its three storeys

(D) A merchant exiled for one year who endured mild discomfort for personal profit

42. The chapter names four जनजातयः (tribes): the Great Andamanese, the Onge, the Jarawa, and the Sentinelese. As a SET, what do these four have in common per the lesson?

(A) they are four British administrative districts of the Andamans

(B) they are four species of coral found around the reefs

(C) they are the islands' indigenous communities, protected under Indian law to preserve their distinct ways of life

(D) they are four prisons built alongside the Cellular Jail

43. The Sentinelese (सेण्टिनली) are singled out as remarkable because they:

(A) are among the world's last uncontacted peoples, living in isolation and shielded from outsiders by Indian law

(B) are the largest, most modernised tribe living in the islands' towns

(C) were the builders and guards of the Cellular Jail

(D) are recent settlers who arrived with the British

44. That Indian law restricts outsiders from approaching the Sentinelese best illustrates which principle the chapter endorses?

- (A) opening every community to tourism for economic growth
- (B) forcing all tribes to assimilate quickly into the mainstream
- (C) clearing tribal forests to expand the prison and the ports
- (D) respecting and protecting indigenous peoples' autonomy and their right to their own way of life

45. A student writes: 'The four tribes are extinct, so the law no longer matters.' Correct this using the chapter:

- (A) correct — they are extinct and the law is a dead letter
- (B) they survive, but the chapter says the law was abolished
- (C) they are extinct, yet the law protects their empty land
- (D) the tribes are living communities still inhabiting the islands; the law actively protects them (the Sentinelese remain uncontacted), so it matters very much

46. Why does the chapter treat the islands' history (prison) and present (protected tribes) side by side?

- (A) to show the same islands carry both a painful colonial past and a present duty of care — for freedom's memory and for indigenous peoples alike
- (B) to argue the tribes built the colonial prison
- (C) to claim the prison and the tribes are the same thing
- (D) to suggest the islands have no present-day life worth protecting

47. जनजाति is contrasted with सामान्यजन ('common/general people'). The precise distinction the chapter wants is:

- (A) they are exact synonyms; both just mean 'people'
- (B) जनजाति means a city crowd, while सामान्यजन means a tribe
- (C) जनजाति = a specific, officially-recognised indigenous (tribal) community; सामान्यजन = the general public at large — the former is a defined group, the latter is everyone
- (D) जनजाति means prisoners, सामान्यजन means guards

48. Reading जनजाति: grammatically: it is a feminine इकारान्त noun. Its प्रथमा एक-द्वि-बहु series is:

- | | |
|--------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| (A) जनजातिः – जनजातौ – जनजातिः | (B) जनजातिम् – जनजाती – जनजातयः |
| (C) जनजातिः – जनजाती – जनजातयः | (D) जनजातिः – जनजात्यौ – जनजातीनि |

49. Which sentence uses जनजाति in its correct, precise sense?

- (A) कारागारे जनजातयः निर्मीयन्ते — 'Tribes are manufactured in the prison'
- (B) समुद्रे जनजातयः तरन्ति — 'Tribes (=fish) swim in the sea'
- (C) विद्यालये जनजातिः पठति — 'A tribe (=a single student) reads in the school'
- (D) अण्डमानद्वीपे चत्वारः जनजातयः निवसन्ति — 'Four indigenous tribes live on the Andaman island'

50. Pick the Sanskrit geography term whose gloss is EXACTLY right:

- (A) प्रवालः = a coconut palm (B) सागरः = a desert
(C) द्वीपसमूहः = a single mountain
(D) प्रवालः = coral (the reef-building marine organism / coral reef material)

51. The Andamans form a द्वीपसमूहः. Splitting द्वीपसमूह = द्वीप + समूह, the term means:

- (A) a very large single island (B) a group/cluster of islands — an archipelago
(C) a group of prisons (D) a chain of mountains in the sea

52. नारिकेलवृक्षाः (coconut palms) and प्रवालप्रस्तराः (coral reefs) are listed among the islands' सौन्दर्यम् (beauty). Together they signal that the chapter's beauty is mainly:

- (A) alpine — glaciers, pine forests and snow (B) desert — dunes, cactus and dry winds
(C) tropical and marine — warm-island scenery of palms, white sand and reef-filled seas
(D) urban — skyscrapers, factories and highways

53. रत्नाकरः, used poetically of the sea around the islands, literally means:

- (A) 'maker of kings' (राज + कर) (B) 'black water' (an exact synonym of कालापानी)
(C) 'three-storeyed building' (a synonym of त्रितलात्मक)
(D) 'mine/treasury of jewels' (रत्न + आकर) — the ocean as a store of gems/pearls

54. The chapter notes the islands are on the यूनेस्को-विश्वदायाद-सूची (UNESCO World Heritage list). Within the chapter, this listing is best understood as recognition of:

- (A) the prison being the world's largest industrial factory
(B) the islands hosting the world's busiest shopping malls
(C) the islands' outstanding natural beauty and ecological/cultural value worth preserving for all humanity
(D) the islands having the world's tallest mountain peaks

55. Synthesise the chapter: which one statement is true on ALL its clauses?

- (A) A Sri Lankan archipelago of snowy peaks, with a Mughal factory and no inhabitants
(B) An Indian desert region with a British school where Savarkar studied for ten days
(C) An Indian archipelago in the Bay of Bengal, beautiful with coral and palms, holding the Cellular Jail (कालापानी) where Savarkar bore ten years for freedom, and home to protected indigenous tribes
(D) A river delta owned by the tribes, who built the Cellular Jail for tourists

56. A student offers four claims; exactly ONE is wholly correct per the chapter and its grammar. Which?

- (A) सोढवान् is a future verb ('he will bear'), and कालापानी is an actual black river
(B) कारागार means 'factory' (= Hindi कारखाना), and जनजाति means 'common people'

(C) द्वीप means 'prison', and the Andamans lie to the west of India

(D) सोढवान् is the past active participle of सह् ('he bore'), and कालापानी names the Cellular Jail (the sea-exile), not a literal river

57. Final synthesis — choose the option in which the Sanskrit form, its grammar, and the chapter-fact ALL line up:

(A) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is a द्वन्द्व of द्वि + अप् (so it means 'two islands'), praised in द्वीपेषु, an instrumental

(B) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपा + अण्डमानः (दीर्घ-sandhi giving आ), and द्वीपेषु is the accusative dual

(C) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपः + नण्डमानः (an न lost), and द्वीपेषु is the genitive singular

(D) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपः + अण्डमानः (visarga-sandhi, ऽ marks the dropped अ), and the Andaman is praised among the islands (द्वीपेषु, locative) as the lovely one

58. रम्यः in द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is a विशेषण (adjective) agreeing with द्वीपः अण्डमानः. Its agreement tells you रम्यः is:

(A) neuter plural, matching वर्षाणि

(B) feminine singular, matching जनजातिः

(C) masculine, singular, nominative — matching the masculine singular nominative noun द्वीपः it qualifies

(D) an indeclinable adverb that never agrees with anything

59. The chapter's setting is a संवादः (dialogue) as students 'tour' the islands through conversation. Compared with a simple descriptive paragraph, the dialogue form mainly serves to:

(A) hide the facts so the reader learns nothing

(B) let questions and answers unfold the geography, history and vocabulary step by step, drawing the reader into discovery

(C) prove that only spoken Sanskrit is correct

(D) replace all the vocabulary with English sentences

60. Combine the etymologies the chapter teaches. Which mapping of word → literal build → meaning is correct on ALL THREE rows?

(A) द्वीप = द्वि+अप् = 'two-watered' (island); कारागार = कारा+(अ)गार = 'confinement-house' (prison); मातृभूमि = मातृ+भूमि = 'mother-land' (homeland)

(B) द्वीप = काल+पानी = 'black water'; कारागार = कारा+खाना = 'work-house'; मातृभूमि = मातृ+भूमि = 'a mother's grave'

(C) द्वीप = द्वि+अप् = 'two houses'; कारागार = कार+गार = 'maker of cars'; मातृभूमि = मातृ+भूमि = 'a queen's land'

(D) द्वीप = त्रि+तल = 'three storeys'; कारागार = कारा+गार = 'coral house'; मातृभूमि = मातृ+भूमि = 'measured land'

Worked Solutions

1. (D) द्वीपः + अण्डमानः: the visarga अः before a voiced sound (here अ) becomes उ → अ + उ = ओ by guṇa, giving द्वीपो; the initial अ of अण्डमानः is then dropped and that loss is written with the अवग्रह ऽ — hence द्वीपोऽण्डमानः. So it is विसर्ग-सन्धि and ऽ marks the elided अ. It is not a दीर्घ merger into आ (the words do not give आ here); the visarga does not become स् before a vowel; and there is no ए (that would need अ + इ/ए) nor any अनुस्वार involved.

2. (D) Undoing the sandhi: द्वीपोऽण्डमानः splits as द्वीपः + अण्डमानः. The ओ is the sandhi-result of the first word's visarga (अः → ओ), so the first word is द्वीपः, not द्वीपो; and the ऽ restores the dropped अ at the start of अण्डमानः. No न is inserted or lost, and the first word does not end in आ — its base form is the nominative singular द्वीपः.

3. (C) Same विसर्ग-सन्धि: रामः + अत्र → रामो + (elided अ)त्र = रामोऽत्र, exactly parallel to द्वीपोऽण्डमानः. The अवग्रह ऽ is required to mark the lost अ. रामात्र (a long आ merger) is wrong; रामश्चत्र wrongly inserts a च (that pattern is for visarga + च); and रामोत्र omits the mandatory अवग्रह that marks the dropped vowel.

4. (B) The indeclinable च means 'and' and coordinates the two preceding nouns: अण्डमानद्वीपः निकोबारद्वीपः च = 'the Andaman island(s) and the Nicobar island(s)', the two groups of the Union Territory. च is not adversative ('but'), not possessive, and not disjunctive ('or' is वा/अथवा).

5. (B) In a Sanskrit nominal compound only the final member is inflected; here द्वीपः (nom. sg.) is the head and निकोबार qualifies it — 'the Nicobar island', a determinative (तत्पुरुष) reading. It is not a द्वन्द्व ('Nicobar AND island'), द्वीप is a noun not a verb, and the two parts are grammatically bound, not accidental neighbours.

6. (B) बङ्ग = Bengal, उप = 'near/sub-', सागर = 'sea/ocean'; बङ्गोपसागर is the 'sea near Bengal' = the Bay of Bengal, and बङ्गोपसागरे is its locative ('in the Bay of Bengal'). सागर means ocean/sea, never a mountain or a river, and उप is a prefix meaning 'near/under', not a doubling particle.

7. (A) The teaching etymology द्वि + अप् ('two waters / water on both sides') explains why an island is so named; the actual word द्वीप shows the इ lengthened to ई (a frozen, lexicalised form), not the live यण्-sandhi output द्व्यप्. So the meaning-derivation stands even though the surface form is an irregular/lexical one. The student's द्व्यप् is the mechanical sandhi but not the attested word; द्व + ईप is a false split; and the अप् ('water') element is precisely what carries the meaning, so it is not 'silent'.

8. (C) द्वीप names land surrounded by water; 'island/isle' is the direct match, and 'peninsula' (Latin paene 'almost' + insula 'island') extends the same water-defined-land idea — both turn on water around land. A continent is defined by size/mass, not by being water-girt; 'archipelago' means a GROUP of many islands, not one rock; and an estuary is where a river meets the sea, not 'two rivers'.

9. (A) अप् 'water' is the second element of द्वीप, where it names the water encircling the land — that is the only meaningful survival of अप् among the choices. दीप ('lamp', from दीप् 'to shine') merely ends in -ीप and is unrelated; पाप ('sin') and रूप ('form') simply contain the letter प and have no connection to अप् 'water'. The trap is matching by sound, not by meaning.

10. (A) द्वीपः / द्वीपौ / द्वीपाः is the प्रथमा-विभक्ति (nominative) one-two-many series of the अकारान्त masculine द्वीप. The title's द्वीपेषु is the सप्तमी बहुवचन (locative plural) = 'among/in the islands', a different case and number — not the singular/dual of the nominative, and not the तृतीया (which would be द्वीपैः, 'by the islands').

11. (A) द्वीपेषु रम्यः ... = 'among the islands, the lovely one (is the Andaman)'. The locative here marks the group from which an item is distinguished (निर्धारणे सप्तमी, the 'locative of selection within a class'). It is not a goal of motion (that would still be locative but the sense here is selection, and Sanskrit uses accusative/locative for goal), not an instrument (that is तृतीया, द्वीपैः), and not possession (that is षष्ठी, द्वीपानाम्).

12. (B) Duration of time over which an action continues stands in the accusative (कालाध्वनोरत्यन्तसंयोगे द्वितीया); दश वर्षाणि ('for ten years') is neuter plural accusative modifying the bearing of suffering. The subject (nominative) is सावरकरः, so 'ten years' is not the subject; 'in the tenth year' would be locative singular दशमे वर्षे; and 'by means of years' (instrumental) makes no sense for duration.

13. (C) वर्ष is अकारान्त नपुंसकलिङ्ग; in the nominative/accusative its एक-द्वि-बहु series is वर्षम् – वर्षे – वर्षाणि (the plural takes -आणि with णत्व). वर्षः/वर्षौ/वर्षाः is the masculine pattern; वर्षा/वर्षे/वर्षाः treats it as feminine; and वर्षानि fails the णत्व (न → ण after र in the same word) that gives the correct वर्षाणि.

14. (B) कारागारे = 'in the prison' is सप्तमी एकवचन (locative singular) of the neuter कारागारः; its locative series is कारागारे – कारागारयोः – कारागारेषु. The instrumental (कारागारेण..., 'by the prison'), genitive (कारागारस्य..., 'of the prison'), and ablative (कारागारात्..., 'from the prison') are different cases with different endings; only the locative gives the 'in' sense and the form कारागारे.

15. (B) भारतस्य is षष्ठी (genitive) = 'of India / India's', expressing that the Andaman island belongs to India (a Union Territory). Origin/'from' is पञ्चमी (भारतात्), location 'in' is सप्तमी (भारते), and instrument 'by' is तृतीया (भारतेन) — none of which is the form भारतस्य, which marks possession.

16. (B) प्रवालप्रस्तरैः ends in -ैः, the तृतीया बहुवचन (instrumental plural) ending of an अकारान्त masculine, so the series is प्रस्तरेण – प्रस्तराभ्याम् – प्रस्तरैः. प्रस्तरः/-रौ/-राः is the nominative, प्रस्तरे/-योः/-रेषु the locative, and प्रस्तरम्/-रौ/-रान् the accusative — only the instrumental yields the -ैः plural seen in प्रवालप्रस्तरैः.

17. (A) क्तवतु (-वत्/-वान्) forms the past ACTIVE participle, focused on the AGENT who completed the act: सोढवान् = 'he who has borne / he bore'. It is not a finite future (that would be सहिष्यते/सोढा etc.), not the क्त passive past participle of the object (सोढ 'borne'), and not the indeclinable gerund (सोढ्वा/-त्वा 'after bearing'); क्तवतु specifically marks the completed-action AGENT.

18. (B) When सह् takes the -त(वत्) suffix, the cluster ह् + त् undergoes regular internal sandhi to yield the retroflex ढ, giving the stem सोढ → सोढवान्. This is a normal phonological change, not an error (सहवान् is wrong); there is no reduplication (that marks perfect/intensive, not क्तवतु); and दश 'ten' is an unrelated number-word, not part of the verb form.

19. (D) The क्तवतु participle agrees with its subject in līṅga; the masculine सोढवान् has the feminine सोढवती ('she who bore'). Participles DO inflect for gender (so 'unchanged' is wrong); सोढवांसः is the masculine plural ('they bore'), not a feminine singular; and सोढ्वा is the indeclinable gerund ('after bearing'), not a participle agreeing with a subject.

20. (A) सावरकरः (masc. sg.) takes the masc. sg. participle सोढवान्, and कष्टम् is the object borne — agreement is correct. A plural subject सावरकराः would need सोढवन्तः; a feminine सीता would need सोढवती; and सोढा is a gerund ('after bearing') that cannot stand alone as the sentence's main predicate without another finite verb.

21. (A) The क्तवतु participle सोढवान् marks a COMPLETED past action: Savarkar HAD borne the ten years' suffering — it is presented as finished history. The present सहते would mean 'he bears (now)', a future form would push it ahead, and a hypothetical/conditional reading is excluded because the participle asserts the act as actually accomplished.

22. (D) सोढवान् is from सह् 'to bear/endure', so it means 'he who endured/bore'. 'Crossed over' belongs to तृ (तीर्णवान्), 'counted' to गण् (गणितवान्/अगणयत्), and 'drowned/sank' to मस्ज् (मग्नः) — different roots entirely. The trap rewards knowing the specific root सह् behind the participle.

23. (A) त्रि = 'three', तल = 'storey/level/floor', आत्मक = 'having the nature/composition of'; त्रितलात्मकम् = 'of three-storey composition' = three-storeyed. It says nothing about coral tiles (that is प्रवाल, the reefs), nothing about a count of prisoners (the design isolated MANY, one per cell), and nothing about centuries (that would need शतक/वर्ष-शत).

24. (C) The jail's defining feature is its cell-by-cell isolation of each prisoner to prevent communication; since Sanskrit has no single established word for that particular cellular architecture, the chapter retains the English term 'Cellular'. Sanskrit can certainly form compounds (so it is not 'forbidden'); 'Cellular' is genuinely English (Latin cella), not disguised Sanskrit; and the borrowing is a lexical-gap decision, not a colonial language order in the text.

25. (C) The point of the Cellular design was solitary confinement: each prisoner alone in a separate cell so they could not talk, support one another, or coordinate — deepening the psychological hardship. It did NOT herd them into one shared hall (the opposite of cellular), did not grant gardens or freedom, and coral (प्रवाल) is a feature of the reefs, not the cells, and is not described as a poison.

26. (B) The chapter's whole tension is that one place is both breathtakingly beautiful (white sand, coral reefs, coconut palms) and the site of a harrowing freedom-struggle prison — beauty beside solemn history. It is not about temples-vs-industry, not mountains-and-deserts (the Andamans are tropical islands, not snowy or arid), and not a river-and-port theme.

27. (B) The chapter's history runs: British construction of the Cellular Jail → imprisonment/exile of freedom-fighters such as Savarkar (कालापानी) → independent India's stewardship, tribal protection, and UNESCO recognition. The other chains insert false agents (Mughals, Indian kings, the tribes building the jail) or false outcomes (Sri Lanka, a school, a factory, the British doing the UNESCO listing), all contradicting the text.

28. (C) कालापानी is a symbolic NAME: 'crossing the black water' meant the dreadful exile by sea to the Andaman prison, from which return seemed impossible. Reading it as a literal black river/sea or as black drinking-water misses the metaphor — there is no actual black river, the surrounding sea is the ordinary Bay of Bengal, and the horror named is the exile-imprisonment, not a beverage.

29. (A) काल carries the twin senses 'black' and 'time/death'; in कालापानी the 'black water' image fuses with overtones of doom — the seas one might never recross, an exile felt as a kind of living death. So both nuances enrich the name. It is not merely 'fixed short terms' (terms were long and brutal), not a flat colour-word stripped of dread, and काल is certainly active here, not irrelevant.

30. (D) कारागारम् neutrally denotes 'a prison'; कालापानी carries the lived dread of the sea-exile — separation across 'black waters', isolation, and the fear of never returning. It does not mean a comfortable jail, is not about wall-colour, and was a name of horror, not a proud self-chosen label.

31. (A) कालापानी denotes the Cellular Jail and the dreaded sea-exile of freedom-fighters — a solemn site of suffering and remembrance, not a literal river or holiday resort. The brochure's whole premise (a 'Black River resort') is mistaken; it is not a spelling slip with an otherwise-fine meaning, and there is no actual coloured river to re-describe as blue.

32. (B) कारा means 'confinement/imprisonment (cell)' and अगर/गार means 'house', so कारागार = 'house of confinement' = a prison. The 'workplace = factory' gloss is the Hindi कारखाना confusion; 'black + water = कालापानी' is a different word with a different morphology; and 'two + water = island' is the द्वीप etymology — none of these is कारागार.

33. (B) कारागार = 'house of confinement' (कारा) = prison; the look-alike Hindi कारखाना = 'work-house' = factory. They are near-homophones with opposite senses, so the कारा 'confinement' vs कार/काम 'work' root distinguishes them. They are not synonyms, the assignment is not reversed (कारागार is the prison), and neither means 'island' (that is द्वीप).

34. (D) The co-text — दश वर्षाणि, कल्पनातीतं घोरं कष्टम्, सोढवान् — is all about long, terrible IMPRISONMENT endured for the nation, which only 'prison' fits. There is no mention of machines/wages (factory), of books/reading (library), or of worship/offerings (temple); context disambiguates कारागार as 'prison'.

35. (C) कारागारात् is पञ्चमी (ablative) = 'from the prison', matching मुक्तः 'freed' (freedom FROM something takes the ablative). 'In the prison' is the locative कारागारे, 'by the prison' the instrumental कारागारेण, and 'of the prison' the genitive कारागारस्य — none of which is the form कारागारात् with its 'from' sense.

36. (D) The चतुर्थी (dative) -आय in स्वातन्त्र्याय expresses purpose: the suffering was endured FOR the goal of freedom (the 'dative of purpose', तादर्थ्ये चतुर्थी). It does not mark a cause already present (that would be ablative/instrumental), not an instrument (तृतीया), and not a location (सप्तमी).

37. (B) मातृभूमि = 'mother-land', the homeland honoured AS a mother; using it frames Savarkar's endurance as love and duty toward the nation-as-mother — patriotism in the idiom of family devotion. It is not about a private birth-mother, certainly not loyalty to the British (whom he resisted), and not a personal farm plot.

38. (A) स्वातन्त्र्य = 'freedom/independence' + वीर = 'hero', so स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः = 'hero of freedom', honouring one who suffered for the country's independence — precisely Savarkar's role in the lesson. It does not mean an aimless wanderer, not a selfish lover of his own freedom, and not someone never imprisoned (he bore ten years inside).

39. (C) अतीत = 'gone beyond / surpassing'; कल्पना = 'imagination'; so कल्पनातीत = 'beyond (the reach of) imagination' — the suffering exceeded what one can picture, intensifying घोरं कष्टम् ('terrible suffering'). It does not mean 'imaginary' (the suffering was very real), not 'before imagining', and not 'a type of imagination' — अतीत specifically means 'transcending/beyond'.

40. (D) By stacking 'terrible suffering', 'ten years', and 'for the Motherland's freedom', the chapter elicits reverence and gratitude for self-sacrifice in the freedom struggle. It is not framed as a foolish or pointless choice, not a comic adventure, and certainly not 'comforts' — the jail meant unimaginable hardship, not ease.

41. (A) Every clause of the correct option matches the text: स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः, मातृभूमेः स्वातन्त्र्याय, कल्पनातीतं घोरं कष्टम्, कालापानी (Cellular Jail), दश वर्षाणि. The distractors each break facts — he was no poet in a library (10 DAYS/comfort is wrong), no British officer/builder, and no profit-seeking merchant with 'one year' of 'mild' discomfort; the duration, motive, and severity are all contradicted.

42. (C) All four are indigenous (आदिवासी/जनजाति) peoples of the Andamans whom independent India protects by law to safeguard their cultures. They are not administrative districts, not coral species (that is प्रवाल/marine life), and not prisons (only the Cellular Jail figures as a prison).

43. (A) The Sentinelese are famous as one of the last UNCONTACTED peoples, deliberately kept in isolation and protected from outside contact by Indian law. They are not a modernised town-dwelling tribe, had no role with the Cellular Jail, and are indigenous islanders, not recent British-era settlers — the opposite of every distractor.

44. (D) Legal protection of the Sentinelese embodies respect for indigenous autonomy and the preservation of their distinct life — the value the chapter upholds. It is the opposite of opening them to tourism, of forced assimilation, or of clearing their land for prisons/ports; the law's purpose is safeguarding, not exploiting, the tribes.

45. (D) The chapter presents the four janajātis as surviving indigenous communities — the Sentinelese famously still living uncontacted — precisely why protective law remains in force and meaningful. They are not extinct, the law was not abolished, and there is no 'empty land' scenario; the correction must affirm both their survival and the law's continuing role.

46. (A) The juxtaposition conveys continuity of meaning: the islands hold both a painful freedom-struggle memory (the jail) and a living responsibility (protecting the tribes and the environment) — past remembrance and present stewardship together. It does not claim the tribes built the prison, does not conflate prison and tribes, and certainly does not deny the islands' protected present life.

47. (C) जनजाति denotes a particular, legally-recognised indigenous community (a Scheduled Tribe), whereas सामान्यजन means the general populace; the contrast is 'a defined indigenous group' vs 'people in general'. They are not synonyms, the meanings are not swapped (जनजाति is not a city crowd), and neither term means prisoners or guards.

48. (C) जनजाति is a feminine इकारान्त noun; its nominative (प्रथमा) one-two-many is जनजातिः — जनजाती — जनजातयः (the very plural जनजातयः the chapter uses for 'the tribes'). The other strings give impossible/mixed endings: जनजातितौ/जनजातिः are not valid इकारान्त forms, जनजातिम् is the accusative singular (not nominative), and जनजात्यौ/जनजातीनि mix in wrong stems/genders.

49. (D) जनजाति = an indigenous tribal community, so 'Four tribes live on the Andaman island' uses it correctly (matching the chapter's four janajātis). The distractors misuse it: tribes are not 'manufactured', जनजाति does not mean fish swimming in the sea, and it is not a single school-going student — all three twist the precise meaning.

50. (D) प्रवाल means coral (प्रवालप्रस्तर = coral reef), one of the islands' natural-beauty features. प्रवाल is not a coconut palm (that is नारिकेल), सागर means 'sea/ocean' not a desert (मरुस्थल), and द्वीपसमूह means an 'archipelago/group of islands', not a single mountain (पर्वत).

51. (B) द्वीप = 'island' + समूह = 'group/collection', so द्वीपसमूह = 'group of islands' = an archipelago, which the Andaman-and-Nicobar chain is. It is not one large island (समूह means MANY), not a group of prisons (that misreads द्वीप as 'prison'), and not undersea mountains (पर्वत), though they happen to be sea-girt land.

52. (C) Coconut palms and coral reefs are quintessentially TROPICAL/marine, matching the Andamans' warm-island beauty (sand, sea, reefs, palms). They are not alpine (no glaciers/pines/snow on these tropical islands), not desert (no dunes/cactus), and not urban (the beauty described is natural, not skyscrapers/factories).

53. (D) रत्नाकर = रत्न ('jewel') + आकर ('mine/source'), 'mine of jewels', a classical epithet for the OCEAN (rich in pearls and gems) — apt for the reef-and-pearl seas around the Andamans. It is not 'maker of kings', not a synonym of कालापानी (which names the prison-exile), and not 'three-storeyed' (that is त्रितलात्मक, describing the jail).

54. (C) UNESCO World Heritage recognition honours outstanding natural and/or cultural value worth safeguarding — fitting the Andamans' reefs, forests and heritage. It is not about a 'factory' (the jail was a prison, not industry), not shopping malls, and not mountain heights — the islands are valued for their natural-and-cultural significance, not commerce or altitude.

55. (C) Every clause of the correct option matches the lesson: Indian territory, Bay of Bengal, coral/palms beauty, the Cellular Jail = कालापानी, Savarkar's ten-year endurance for freedom, and law-protected indigenous tribes. Each distractor falsifies multiple facts — Sri Lankan/snowy/Mughal-factory/uninhabited; desert/school/ten DAYS of study; or river-delta/tribe-built jail for tourists — all contradicted by the text.

56. (D) Correct on both clauses: सोढवान' is the क्तवतु past ACTIVE participle of सह् ('he bore/endured'), and कालापानी is the symbolic NAME of the Cellular Jail / sea-exile, not a literal river. The others each carry two errors: सोढवान' is not a future and कालापानी is no real river; कारागार is a PRISON (not the factory कारखाना) and जनजाति is an indigenous TRIBE (not common folk); and द्वीप means 'island' (not 'prison') while the Andamans lie to the EAST (Bay of Bengal), not west.

57. (D) All three threads cohere only in the correct option: द्वीपोऽण्डमानः resolves to द्वीपः + अण्डमानः by विसर्ग-सन्धि (अः → ओ, the अवग्रह ऽ marking the elided अ), and द्वीपेषु is सप्तमी बहुवचन (locative plural, 'among the islands') in the title's claim that the Andaman is the loveliest. The distractors err in grammar and fact: it is not a द्वन्द्व of द्वि+अप' and द्वीपेषु is not instrumental; it does not split as द्वीपा+अण्डमानः with a long-आ merger nor is द्वीपेषु an accusative dual; and no न is lost, nor is द्वीपेषु a genitive singular (that would be द्वीपस्य).

58. (C) A Sanskrit adjective agrees with its noun in līṅga, vacana and vibhakti; रम्यः ('lovely') qualifies the masc. sg. nom. द्वीपः (अण्डमानः), so रम्यः is itself masc. sg. nom. It does not agree with the neuter plural वर्षाणि (that would be रम्याणि), nor with feminine जनजातिः (that would be रम्या), and it is a declinable adjective, not an indeclinable adverb.

59. (B) Casting the lesson as a संवाद (dialogue) lets one speaker's questions draw out another's answers, revealing the islands' geography, history and key words progressively and engagingly. It does not hide facts (it reveals them), makes no claim that only spoken Sanskrit is valid, and the Sanskrit vocabulary (द्वीप, कारागार, सोढवान्, जनजाति, प्रवाल) is retained, not replaced by English.

60. (A) Each row of the correct option is the chapter's own etymology: द्वि('two')+अप्('water') = island; कारा('confinement')+आगार('house') = prison; मातृ('mother')+भूमि('land') = the homeland revered as a mother. The distractors each corrupt rows — द्वीप is not काल+पानी (that is कालापानी) and कारागार is not the Hindi कारखाना

'work-house'; अप् means 'water' not 'house' and कार is not 'car'; and त्रि+तल ('three storeys') describes the jail's height, not द्वीप, while गार is 'house' not 'coral' (प्रवाल).
