Subject	Sanskrit (NCERT Class 7, Deepakam)
Chapter	2 — नित्यं पिबामः सुभाषितरसम् (Nityam Pibamah Subhashitarasam)
Total Questions	60 (Multiple Choice, single correct)
Maximum Marks	240
Suggested Time	90 minutes

Marking scheme: +4 for each correct answer · -1 for each wrong answer · 0 if unattempted.

Instructions: Each question has four options (A), (B), (C), (D); exactly one is correct. Classic traps: count exactly FIVE 'va' qualities (विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विनय) and exactly SIX faults (निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, आलस्यम्, दीर्घसूत्रता); आलस्यम् ≠ दीर्घसूत्रता and निद्रा ≠ तन्द्रा; in the purification verse the intellect (बुद्धिः) is cleaned by ज्ञानेन (knowledge) NOT जलेन, while गात्राणि-जलेन, मनः-सत्येन, आत्मा-तपसा; सुभाषितम् is NEUTER (plural सुभाषितानि); and the means-of-action words take the INSTRUMENTAL (तृतीया), not nominative. Do not write on this paper — mark answers on your answer sheet.

1. The chapter title नित्यं पिबामः सुभाषितरसम् is best rendered as:

- (A) 'Sometimes we forget the wise sayings'
- (B) 'We never taste the juice of fruits'
- (C) 'We sing six songs every night'
- (D) 'Daily we drink the nectar (rasa) of well-spoken sayings'

2. सुभाषितम् splits as सु + भाषितम्. Treating सु as a prefix, which other word uses सु in the SAME sense ('well/good')?

- (A) षड्दोषाः ('six faults'), where सु would mean 'six'
- (B) सुभाषितरसम् ('the nectar of well-spoken sayings')
- (C) जलबिन्दुः ('water-drop'), where सु would mean 'water'
- (D) दीर्घसूत्रता, where सु would mean 'thread'

3. Why is सुभाषिताः (with -आः) an incorrect plural for सुभाषितम्, while it would be correct for a word like नरः?

- (A) सुभाषितम् is neuter and takes the neuter plural सुभाषितानि (-आनि), whereas नरः is masculine and takes -आः (नराः)
- (B) सुभाषितम् is feminine and takes -आः, but नरः refuses it
- (C) Both words are neuter, so neither can take -आः
- (D) सुभाषितम् is a verb, so it has no plural at all

4. Which sequence shows सुभाषितम् correctly going singular → plural in the SAME case (nominative)?

- (A) सुभाषितम् → सुभाषितानि (B) सुभाषितम् → सुभाषिताः
- (C) सुभाषितम् → सुभाषिता (D) सुभाषितम् → सुभाषितेन

5. A subhashita is praised as 'rasa' (nectar) one drinks daily. This metaphor implies that wise sayings are:

- (A) bitter medicine to be avoided (B) useful only once and then discarded
- (C) nourishing and to be enjoyed and absorbed regularly, like a sustaining drink
- (D) physical water that quenches bodily thirst

6. नरः पञ्चभिः वकारैः पूजितः. The phrase पञ्चभिः वकारैः literally means:

- (A) 'by five va-letters' (five qualities each beginning with व)
- (B) 'of five va-letters' (possession) (C) 'to five va-letters' (recipients)
- (D) 'five va-letters!' (an address)

7. Which option lists the five 'va' qualities in a way that is COMPLETE and contains NO intruder?

- (A) विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विवेक (B) विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विनय
- (C) विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, विनय (only four) (D) विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विनय, विवेक (six)

8. All five honouring qualities share one feature that the six faults do NOT. That feature is:

- (A) every quality-word begins with the letter न
- (B) every quality-word is in the instrumental case in its base form
- (C) every quality-word names a part of the body
- (D) every quality-word begins with the letter व

9. वपुस् (body) is honoured as a 'va' quality, yet the faults include तन्द्रा (drowsiness) and निद्रा (sleep), both bodily states. The chapter's logic is best stated as:

- (A) the body is always a fault, so वपुस् is wrongly listed
- (B) sleep and drowsiness are virtues because they rest the body
- (C) वपुस् and निद्रा mean the same thing
- (D) a healthy body (वपुस्) is a virtue, but yielding to sleep/drowsiness is a fault — the issue is mastery over the body, not the body itself

10. विद्यया, वपुषा, वाचा, वस्त्रेण, विनयेन — these are the five qualities as they actually appear in the verse. What grammatical fact do all five forms share?

- (A) they are all nominative subjects of the verb
- (B) they are all vocative, addressing the qualities
- (C) they are all in the instrumental (तृतीया) case, expressing 'by/with' the means of honour
- (D) they are all genitive, showing whose qualities they are

11. Which pairing of a 'va' quality with its instrumental form is CORRECT?

- (A) विद्या (knowledge) → विद्येन
- (B) वस्त्र (dress) → वस्त्रया
- (C) वाणी (speech) → वाचा ('by speech')
- (D) वपुस् (body) → वपुना

12. षड् दोषाः ... हातव्याः भूतिम् इच्छता. Putting the grammar together, the line means:

- (A) 'six faults should be collected by one who fears prosperity'
- (B) 'six virtues are to be praised by the prosperous'
- (C) 'the six faults are to be given up by one who desires prosperity'
- (D) 'six faults give prosperity to one who keeps them'

13. हातव्याः is a gerundive ('to-be-abandoned'). Which paraphrase preserves its force MOST exactly?

- (A) 'were discarded long ago'
- (B) 'are being discarded right now'
- (C) 'will be praised in future'
- (D) 'ought to be discarded / must be given up'

14. Why does भूतिम् इच्छता appear in the instrumental rather than the nominative भूतिम् इच्छन्?

- (A) because इच्छता is the subject performing पूजा (worship)
- (B) because भूतिम् इच्छता means 'prosperity is desired by no one'
- (C) because the instrumental here means 'O prosperity-desirer!'
- (D) because the gerundive हातव्याः requires its agent ('the one who must give them up') in the instrumental — the doer of a 'to-be-done' action

15. Which list correctly names exactly the SIX faults with no virtue smuggled in?

- (A) निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, आलस्यम् (only five)
- (B) निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, विनय, दीर्घसूत्रता
- (C) निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, आलस्यम्, दीर्घसूत्रता, विद्या
- (D) निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, आलस्यम्, दीर्घसूत्रता

16. A reader merges निद्रा with तन्द्रा and आलस्यम् with दीर्घसूत्रता, then says 'there are really only four faults'. The correct response is:

- (A) the reader is right — there are four faults
- (B) the verse names six DISTINCT faults; निद्रा≠तन्द्रा (sleep vs drowsiness) and आलस्यम्≠दीर्घसूत्रता (laziness vs procrastination), so merging undercounts
- (C) there are actually eight faults once you split them
- (D) there are six, but निद्रा and आलस्यम् are the same

17. Among the six faults, which two are most easily confused yet are explicitly distinct — one being general inactivity, the other delaying particular tasks?

- (A) निद्रा (sleep) and क्रोधः (anger)
- (B) आलस्यम् (general laziness) and दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination)

(C) भयम् (fear) and वपुस् (body)

(D) विद्या (knowledge) and विनय (humility)

18. तन्द्रा and निद्रा are listed separately. The finest distinction is:

(A) निद्रा is drowsiness; तन्द्रा is deep sleep (the reverse)

(B) निद्रा is full sleep; तन्द्रा is drowsiness/half-sleep (sluggish wakefulness)

(C) both mean anger in different degrees (D) निद्रा is fear and तन्द्रा is laziness

19. आलस्यं हि मनुष्याणां शरीरस्थो महान् रिपुः — the sense is:

(A) 'laziness is a small friend outside the body of men'

(B) 'the body of men is the enemy of laziness'

(C) 'laziness is indeed the great enemy that dwells within the body of human beings'

(D) 'great enemies make men lazy through their bodies'

20. Laziness is called शरीरस्थः रिपुः ('an enemy seated in the body'). The deeper point of calling it an INNER enemy is that:

(A) one should fear external enemies more than laziness

(B) the body itself is the enemy and should be neglected

(C) the obstacle to achievement is within oneself, not an outside foe, so one must conquer one's own tendency

(D) an inner enemy cannot be overcome, so effort is useless

21. मनुष्याणाम् in आलस्यं हि मनुष्याणां ... रिपुः answers the question 'enemy OF WHOM?'. Its case and number are:

(A) genitive (षष्ठी) plural — 'of men'

(B) instrumental plural — 'by men'

(C) accusative plural — 'the men'

(D) dative singular — 'for a man'

22. If आलस्यम् is the inner रिपुः, which fault is its natural ally because it postpones the very tasks laziness avoids?

(A) विनय (humility)

(B) विद्या (knowledge)

(C) दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination)

(D) सत्यम् (truth)

23. The purification verse pairs four parts with four means. Which COMPLETE matching is correct?

(A) गात्राणि—ज्ञानेन, मनः—जलेन, आत्मा—सत्येन, बुद्धिः—तपसा

(B) गात्राणि—जलेन, मनः—सत्येन, आत्मा—तपसा, बुद्धिः—ज्ञानेन

(C) गात्राणि—जलेन, मनः—तपसा, आत्मा—सत्येन, बुद्धिः—ज्ञानेन

(D) गात्राणि—सत्येन, मनः—जलेन, आत्मा—ज्ञानेन, बुद्धिः—तपसा

24. बुद्धिः केन शुध्यति? and why is जलेन the trap answer?

(A) बुद्धिः जलेन शुध्यति; ज्ञानेन is the trap

(B) बुद्धिः ज्ञानेन शुध्यति; जलेन is a trap because water cleans the body (गात्राणि), NOT the intellect

(C) बुद्धिः तपसा शुध्यति; ज्ञानेन cleans the soul (D) बुद्धिः सत्येन शुध्यति; जलेन cleans the soul

25. The verse uses a different means for each part — water for the body, truth for the mind, austerity for the soul, knowledge for the intellect. The principle this teaches is:

- (A) water alone purifies all four parts
- (B) knowledge alone is enough for body, mind, soul and intellect
- (C) each goal needs its own appropriate means; one method does not purify everything
- (D) the four parts cannot be purified at all

26. शुध्यति in गात्राणि जलेन शुध्यन्ति is verb-number-matched to its subject. Which form is grammatically right for the plural subject गात्राणि?

- (A) शुध्यन्ति (plural) — 'the limbs are purified'
- (B) शुध्यति (singular) — because गात्राणि is treated as one body
- (C) शुध्यन्तु (command) — 'let the limbs purify'
- (D) अशुध्यत् (past) — 'the limbs were impure'

27. A student washes his hands but lies and keeps an angry, restless mind. By the verse's logic he has:

- (A) purified everything, since water cleans the mind too
- (B) purified the soul, which only needs water
- (C) purified the body (by जल) but left the mind unpurified, since the mind needs सत्य (truth), not water
- (D) purified the intellect, since washing equals knowledge

28. जलबिन्दुनिपातेन क्रमशः पूर्यते घटः — the precise meaning is:

- (A) 'by the falling of water-drops, the pot is gradually filled'
- (B) 'by one great flood the pot is filled at once'
- (C) 'drop by drop the pot is emptied'
- (D) 'the pot breaks under falling drops'

29. पूर्यते in जलबिन्दुनिपातेन ... पूर्यते घटः is a passive form. The voice tells us:

- (A) the pot is actively filling something else
- (B) the pot is the thing being filled (patient), and the drops (instrumental) are the means doing the filling
- (C) the drops are being filled by the pot
- (D) no one and nothing is filled — it is a question

30. The drop-and-pot image is extended in the verse to three things that also grow gradually. Which trio is correct?

- (A) निद्रा (sleep), क्रोधः (anger), भयम् (fear)
- (B) विद्या (knowledge), धर्मः (virtue), धनम् (wealth)
- (C) जलम् (water), घटः (pot), बिन्दुः (drop)
- (D) रिपुः (enemy), तन्द्रा (drowsiness), आलस्यम् (laziness)

31. क्रमशः in the verse rules out which mistaken idea about gaining knowledge and wealth?

- (A) that they appear gradually through steady effort
- (B) that they require any means at all
- (C) that water can fill a pot

(D) that they appear all at once, instantly, without sustained effort

32. Two students study for the same exam: Aarav reviews 20 minutes every day; Bina does nothing until the last night, then studies 10 hours. The pot-and-drop verse most directly endorses:

- (A) Bina's last-night marathon — one big effort fills the pot fastest
- (B) neither, since the verse is only about literal water
- (C) both equally, since total time is what the verse counts
- (D) Aarav's daily 20 minutes — steady accumulation like drops filling the pot

33. Bina's habit in the previous scenario (doing nothing until the last night) is, in the chapter's vocabulary, an example of:

- (A) क्रमशः (gradual effort)
- (B) विनय (humility)
- (C) दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination)
- (D) सङ्गतिः (good company)

34. The chapter pairs a 'gradual accumulation' verse (drop fills pot) with a 'right means for each goal' verse (purification). Read together, their shared message is:

- (A) worthwhile results come from steady effort using the appropriate means for each goal
- (B) any means will do as long as you wait long enough
- (C) speed matters more than choosing the right method
- (D) results are fixed at birth and effort changes nothing

35. प्रेरकः is formed from the root √प्रेरय्/प्र-ईर ('to impel') with the agent-suffix -अक. By this formation प्रेरकः means:

- (A) 'one who impels/inspires' — an inspirer
- (B) 'the act of being impelled' — inspiration itself
- (C) 'one who is inspired' — a follower
- (D) 'a place of inspiration'

36. Given प्रेरकः = inspirer (one who drives forward) and रिपुः = enemy, which classroom situation fits BOTH terms correctly?

- (A) a coach who pushes hard is a रिपुः, and laziness is a प्रेरकः
- (B) both the coach and laziness are प्रेरकाः
- (C) both the coach and laziness are रिपवः
- (D) a coach who pushes a student to work hard is a प्रेरकः, while the student's own laziness is the inner रिपुः

37. रिपुः means 'enemy'. Which word from the chapter is its closest OPPOSITE in spirit (something beneficial to keep near)?

- (A) दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination)
- (B) निद्रा (sleep)
- (C) सङ्गतिः (good company)
- (D) क्रोधः (anger)

38. The chapter values सङ्गतिः (company). Which scenario best applies that teaching?

- (A) avoiding all friends because company is always harmful
- (B) choosing diligent, honest friends because the company you keep shapes your character
- (C) keeping lazy friends because comfort matters most
- (D) judging company only by wealth, not character

39. A child keeps company with friends who all procrastinate and skip work, and soon does the same. The subhashitas would describe this as:

- (A) the effect of good सङ्गतिः strengthening विद्या
- (B) the effect of poor सङ्गतिः — bad company breeding the fault of दीर्घसूत्रता in the child
- (C) proof that सङ्गतिः has no influence on character
- (D) the child practising विनय (humility)

40. दीर्घसूत्रता and दीर्घायुष् both open with दीर्घ ('long'), but their meanings diverge entirely. The pair is:

- (A) दीर्घसूत्रता = long life; दीर्घायुष् = procrastination
- (B) both mean 'a long thread' (C) both mean 'a long life'
- (D) दीर्घसूत्रता = procrastination ('long-thread-ness'); दीर्घायुष् = long-lived (long life)

41. What does the दीर्घसूत्रता / दीर्घायुष् contrast teach about reading Sanskrit compounds?

- (A) the first member alone always fixes the meaning
- (B) compounds with the same first word always mean the same
- (C) the second member never affects meaning
- (D) the same first member can yield very different meanings, so the WHOLE compound (and its second member) must be read

42. दीर्घायुष् is best classified as:

- (A) the sixth fault, replacing दीर्घसूत्रता (B) another name for आलस्यम्
- (C) the name of the pot in the drop verse
- (D) a blessing/virtue (a long lifespan), NOT one of the six faults

43. सुभाषितरसम् (title) is a compound of सुभाषित + रस. Its structure is best described as:

- (A) 'the rasa OF subhashitas' — a tatpurusha (the first member relates to the second like a genitive)
- (B) 'subhashita AND rasa' — two equal coordinated nouns
- (C) 'a rasa that is also a subhashita' — pure apposition with no relation
- (D) 'O subhashita-rasa!' — a vocative compound

44. नरः पञ्चभिः वकारैः पूजितः. If the meaning changed to 'a man is honoured by SIX va-qualities', the number-word would change to:

- (A) षड्भिः (instrumental of षष्, 'six') (B) पञ्चभिः (it stays the same)
- (C) षष्ठीभिः (genitive form) (D) षट्सु (locative form)

45. पञ्चभिः answers कतिभिः ('by how many?'). पञ्चभिः is the instrumental plural of which stem?

(A) षष् (six)

(B) दश (ten)

(C) पञ्चन् (five)

(D) त्रि (three)

46. Why are विद्यया and वस्त्रेण BOTH instrumental even though their endings differ (-या vs -ेण)?

(A) they are in different cases — one instrumental, one genitive

(B) they belong to different stem-classes (feminine ā-stem vs neuter a-stem), but both realise the same instrumental (तृतीया) meaning 'by/with'

(C) the differing endings mean one is singular and one is plural

(D) विद्यया is a verb form while वस्त्रेण is a noun

47. Build the correct instrumental phrase for a NEW idea — 'honoured by humility' — using the chapter's pattern (विनय = humility):

(A) विनयः पूजितः ('humility is honoured') (B) विनयेन पूजितः ('honoured by humility')

(C) विनयाय पूजितः ('honoured for humility')(D) विनयस्य पूजितः ('of humility, honoured')

48. Form the correct instrumental for 'the body is purified by water' on the verse's pattern (जल = water):

(A) जलेन शुध्यति ('is purified by water') (B) जलम् शुध्यति ('water is purified')

(C) जलाय शुध्यति ('purified for water')

(D) जले शुध्यति ('purified in water', literal location)

49. In शुध्यति केन? ('by what does it become pure?'), the question-word केन is itself in the instrumental. This tells us the EXPECTED answer must be:

(A) a nominative subject, e.g. बुद्धिः (B) a genitive, e.g. मनुष्याणाम्

(C) another instrumental, e.g. ज्ञानेन / जलेन / सत्येन / तपसा (a means)

(D) a vocative, e.g. हे बुद्धे

50. Match the question-word to the case it expects: which pairing is CORRECT?

(A) केन ('by what') → nominative answer (बुद्धिः)

(B) केषाम् ('of whom') → instrumental answer (मनुष्यैः)

(C) कतिभिः ('by how many') → instrumental plural answer (पञ्चभिः)

(D) कस्मै ('for whom') → genitive answer (मनुष्यस्य)

51. नरः in नरः पञ्चभिः वकारैः पूजितः is the one being honoured. Its case is nominative because:

(A) नरः is the subject of which the predicate पूजितः ('honoured') is asserted

(B) नरः is the means by which honour is done

(C) नरः is the person to whom something is given

(D) नरः is being directly addressed ('O man!')

52. In आलस्यं ... मनुष्याणां ... रिपुः, the words आलस्यम् and रिपुः are both nominative. Their relationship is:

(A) आलस्यम् acts ON रिपुः as its object

(B) रिपुः is the means by which laziness works

(C) रिपुः is the possessor of laziness

(D) predicate identification — 'laziness IS an enemy' (subject and predicate noun agree in the nominative)

53. Identify the case used for 'the means of purifying' versus 'whose limbs are purified'. Which mapping is correct?

- (A) means → genitive; possessor → instrumental
- (B) means → instrumental (जलेन); 'whose limbs' (possessor) → genitive
- (C) means → nominative; possessor → accusative
- (D) means → dative; possessor → locative

54. Which pairing of word and meaning is CORRECT?

- (A) सङ्गतिः = company/association
- (B) प्रेरकः = enemy
- (C) रिपुः = inspirer
- (D) घटः = procrastination

55. Which item is the ODD ONE OUT because it is NOT one of the six faults?

- (A) आलस्यम् (laziness)
- (B) विनय (humility)
- (C) तन्द्रा (drowsiness)
- (D) क्रोधः (anger)

56. Which item is the ODD ONE OUT because it is NOT one of the four purification MEANS?

- (A) जलम् (water)
- (B) सत्यम् (truth)
- (C) तपस् (austerity)
- (D) वस्त्रम् (dress)

57. Taking the whole chapter together, respect (पूजा) is earned by _____ and faults are shed by one who desires _____.

- (A) the five 'va' qualities (विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विनय) ... prosperity (भूतिम्)
- (B) the six faults ... sleep (निद्राम्)
- (C) water and knowledge ... anger (क्रोधम्)
- (D) procrastination ... an enemy (रिपुम्)

58. A pupil summarises: 'There are five faults, the intellect is purified by water, and दीर्घसूत्रता means long life.' How many distinct errors are in this summary?

- (A) three — faults are six (not five), the intellect is purified by knowledge (not water), and दीर्घसूत्रता means procrastination (not long life)
- (B) one — only the count of faults is wrong
- (C) two — the faults count and the दीर्घसूत्रता meaning, but water is fine
- (D) zero — the summary is entirely correct

59. The two great life-lessons of these subhashitas can be summed up as a 'both/and'. The best statement is:

- (A) cultivate qualities OR shed faults, but never both at once
- (B) rely on a single all-purpose method and avoid all effort
- (C) cultivate good qualities AND shed faults; and pursue goals with steady effort AND the right means for each
- (D) achieve everything instantly through good company alone

60. Which one-line takeaway best captures the chapter's title नित्यं पिबामः सुभाषितरसम् as a guide to living?

- (A) read one wise saying once in a lifetime and stop
- (B) drink water daily to purify the intellect
- (C) memorise sayings only before an exam
- (D) make absorbing wise sayings a DAILY habit, so their wisdom accumulates like drops filling a pot

Worked Solutions

1. (D) नित्यम् = daily/always, पिबामः = we drink, सुभाषित-रसम् = the rasa (essence/nectar) of subhashitas. The verb पिबामः is first-person plural ('we drink'); 'sometimes/forget', 'never/fruit-juice' and 'six songs/night' all mistranslate the words.

2. (B) सु- as a prefix means 'well/good', and सुभाषितरसम् itself carries that सु. 'Six' is षष्/षड् (षड्दोषः), not सु; 'water' is जल (जलबिन्दुः); the सूत्र in दीर्घसूत्रता means 'thread', unrelated to the prefix सु.

3. (A) Gender drives the ending. सुभाषितम् (-अम्, neuter, like ज्ञानम्) → plural सुभाषितानि. नरः (-अः, masculine) → plural नराः. The -आः plural belongs to masculines; applying it to a neuter is the error. सुभाषितम् is neuter (not feminine), is not a verb, and नरः is masculine (not neuter).

- 4. (A) Neuter -अम् stems form the nominative plural in -आनि: सुभाषितम् → सुभाषितानि. सुभाषिताः is a masculine-style plural, सुभाषिता is a stem/feminine-looking form, and सुभाषितेन is the instrumental singular ('by a saying'), not a plural.
- 5. (C) Calling subhashitas a 'rasa' we drink नित्यम् (daily) frames them as daily, enjoyable nourishment for the mind. They are not bitter/avoided, not single-use, and the 'drinking' is figurative (mental nourishment), not literal water for the body.
- 6. (A) पञ्चभिः वकारैः is instrumental plural = 'by five va-words', the means by which a person (नरः) is honoured. 'Of' would be genitive (पञ्चानां वकाराणाम्), 'to/for' dative, and an address vocative — none match the means-sense of तृतीया here.
- 7. (B) The exactly five are विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विनय. The first distractor swaps विनय for विवेक (an intruder); the second drops वस्त्र (only four); the third adds विवेक as a sixth. Counting exactly five and naming all of them is the test.
- 8. (D) The five are 'va' qualities — विद्या, वपुस्, वाणी, वस्त्र, विनय — all starting with व; that is exactly why नरः is honoured 'पञ्चभिः वकारैः'. They do not start with न, their base (dictionary) forms are not instrumental, and only वपुस् (body) relates to the body.
- 9. (D) वपुस् praises good physique as something that wins respect; निद्रा and तन्द्रा are faults because they are surrenders of the will. So the body is a virtue while indulgence in sleep/drowsiness is a fault — mastery over the body, not the body, is the point. The body is not always a fault, sleep/drowsiness are faults (not virtues), and वपुस् ≠ निद्रा.
- 10. (C) Each form (विद्यया, वपुषा, वाचा, वस्त्रेण, विनयेन) is instrumental — the means by which a person is पूजितः (honoured). They are not the subject (nominative), not addresses (vocative), and not possessives (genitive). The differing endings (-या, -आ, -ेण, -ेन) all realise the same तृतीया meaning across different stems.
- 11. (C) वाणी/वाच् → instrumental वाचा ('by speech') is correct. विद्या (feminine ā-stem) → विद्यया, not विद्येन; वस्त्र (neuter) → वस्त्रेण, not वस्त्रया; वपुस् (neuter s-stem) → वपुषा, not वपुना. Matching each stem to its proper तृतीया ending is the skill.
- 12. (C) षड् दोषाः = six faults (nominative, the subject), हातव्याः = to-be-abandoned (gerundive agreeing with दोषाः), भूतिम् इच्छता = by one desiring prosperity (इच्छता is instrumental, भूतिम् its object). So: the six faults must be given up by a prosperity-seeker. The distractors invert 'give up' to 'collect', swap faults for virtues, or reverse the cause-effect.
- 13. (D) A gerundive (कृत्य) expresses obligation/necessity — 'ought to / must be done'. हातव्याः = 'are to be given up'. It is not a past tense ('were discarded'), not a present progressive ('being discarded now'), and certainly not praise — the faults are to be abandoned, not commended.

14. (D) With a gerundive (हातव्याः), the agent who is obliged to act stands in the instrumental: हातव्याः ... इच्छता = 'to be given up by the one desiring (prosperity)'. इच्छता is not a nominative subject of a finite verb, the line affirms (not negates) desire for prosperity, and the instrumental is not a vocative address.

15. (D) The six are निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, आलस्यम्, दीर्घसूत्रता. The first distractor drops दीर्घसूत्रता (five only); the second replaces आलस्यम् with विनय, a virtue intruder; the third adds विद्या (a virtue) as a seventh. Exactly six, all faults.

16. (B) Each of the six is a separate fault: निद्रा (sleep) vs तन्द्रा (drowsiness) are different states, and आलस्यम् (general laziness) vs दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination of specific tasks) are different vices. Merging them wrongly yields four; there are six, not four or eight, and निद्रा ≠ आलस्यम्.

17. (B) आलस्यम् = general laziness/inactivity; दीर्घसूत्रता = procrastinating specific tasks ('long-thread-ness'). They are distinct yet confusable. निद्रा/क्रोधः and भयम् are unrelated to each other in that contrast; वपुस्, विद्या and विनय are virtues, not faults, so they cannot be the confused fault-pair.

18. (B) निद्रा = sleep proper; तन्द्रा = drowsiness, the heavy-eyed sluggish state short of true sleep. The reverse mapping is wrong; neither means anger (that is क्रोधः); and निद्रा is not fear (भयम्) nor तन्द्रा laziness (आलस्यम्).

19. (C) आलस्यम् = laziness (subject), मनुष्याणाम् = of men (genitive plural), शरीरस्थः = dwelling in the body, महान् रिपुः = a great enemy. So laziness is the great inner enemy of men. It is not a small/external friend, men's body is not the enemy of laziness, and the subject is laziness — not external enemies.

20. (C) By placing the रिपुः inside the शरीर, the verse says the real obstacle is one's own laziness, to be conquered by self-effort. It does not redirect blame to outside enemies, does not condemn the body itself (cf. वपुस् as a virtue), and is motivational — the inner enemy can and must be overcome.

21. (A) मनुष्याणाम् (-आणाम्) is the genitive plural, expressing 'of men / whose enemy'. Instrumental plural would be मनुष्यैः ('by men'), accusative plural मनुष्यान् ('the men' as object), and dative singular मनुष्याय ('for a man'). The 'enemy of whom' sense is genitive.

22. (C) दीर्घसूत्रता (delaying tasks) reinforces आलस्यम् (laziness) — both keep work undone, so it is the natural ally. विनय (humility) and विद्या (knowledge) are virtues, and सत्यम् (truth) is the means that purifies the mind — none are faults allied with laziness.

23. (B) The verse cleans the body (गात्राणि) by water (जलेन), the mind (मनः) by truth (सत्येन), the soul (आत्मा) by austerity (तपसा), and the intellect (बुद्धिः) by knowledge (ज्ञानेन). Each distractor scrambles at least one pair — e.g. swapping water onto the intellect, or truth onto the soul. Only the first keeps all four correct.

24. (B) The intellect is purified by knowledge (ज्ञानेन). जलेन (water) belongs to the body (गात्राणि), so applying it to बुद्धिः is the classic mismatch. तपसा (austerity) cleans the आत्मा, and सत्येन (truth) cleans the मनः — neither cleans the intellect.

25. (C) By matching each part to a distinct means, the verse teaches that different ends require different, fitting methods — you cannot scrub the intellect with water. So neither water alone nor knowledge alone suffices for all four, and the verse plainly asserts each CAN be purified by its proper means.

26. (A) गात्राणि is neuter plural ('limbs/body-parts'), so the present-tense verb agrees in the plural: शुध्यन्ति. The singular शुध्यति suits a singular subject like बुद्धिः शुध्यति. शुध्यन्तु is an imperative ('let them...'), and अशुध्यत् is past tense — neither matches a simple present statement.

27. (C) Water (जल) purifies गात्राणि (the body), so his hands are clean; but the mind (मनः) is purified by truth (सत्येन), and his lying leaves it impure. Water does not clean the mind, the soul needs तपस् (not water), and washing is not ज्ञान, so the intellect is untouched too.

28. (A) जलबिन्दु-निपातेन = by the falling of water-drops (instrumental, the means), क्रमशः = gradually/step by step, पूर्यते = is filled (passive), घटः = the pot. So the pot fills slowly, drop by drop. It is not a single flood, not emptying, and not breaking — the point is gradual accumulation.

29. (B) पूर्यते is passive ('is filled'); the grammatical subject घटः (pot) is the patient that gets filled, while जलबिन्दुनिपातेन (instrumental) is the means. The pot does not fill something else, the drops are not filled by the pot, and it is a statement, not a question.

30. (B) The verse says विद्या (knowledge), धर्म (virtue) and धन (wealth) accumulate gradually, just as the pot fills drop by drop. The faults (sleep/anger/fear; drowsiness/laziness) are not what one builds up; water/pot/drop are the image itself, not the things being taught to grow.

31. (D) क्रमशः = 'gradually, step by step', so it directly contradicts the idea of instant, effortless gain. It AFFIRMS gradual steady effort (so that is not ruled out), does not deny that means are needed, and does not contradict the literal water-fills-pot image — it builds on it.

32. (D) जलबिन्दुनिपातेन क्रमशः पूर्यते घटः praises gradual, regular accumulation — Aarav's daily study. Bina's last-minute cramming is closer to neglect-then-rush, which the gradual-effort image rejects; the verse is a metaphor (not only about literal water); and it explicitly values the manner (steady) over mere total time.

33. (C) Delaying tasks until the last moment is दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination), one of the six faults. क्रमशः is the opposite (gradual effort), विनय is humility, and सङ्गतिः is keeping good company — none describes last-minute delay.

34. (A) The pot verse stresses steady, gradual effort; the purification verse stresses using the FITTING means for each part. Combined: steady effort + right means. So 'any means' is wrong (the purification verse insists on the right one), speed is not the lesson, and effort plainly matters (against fatalism).

35. (A) The -अक (agent) suffix names the DOER: प्रेरकः = 'one who impels/inspires'. The abstract act would be प्रेरणा, the one inspired (patient) would be a different formation (e.g. प्रेरितः), and a place would need a locative-type derivation — none of which -अक gives.

36. (D) A motivating coach inspires → प्रेरकः; the laziness that blocks the student is the inner enemy → रिपुः (cf. शरीरस्थः रिपुः). Calling the coach a रिपुः or laziness a प्रेरकः inverts the meanings, and the two cannot both be the same term since one helps and one harms.

37. (C) A रिपुः (enemy) harms; the beneficial counterpart the chapter recommends keeping is good सङ्गतिः (company), which improves character. दीर्घसूत्रता, निद्रा and क्रोधः are faults — themselves enemy-like, not opposites of an enemy.

38. (B) सङ्गतिः teaches that the company one keeps moulds one's character, so one should choose diligent, virtuous companions. The teaching is not anti-friendship, does not endorse lazy company, and weighs character over wealth — only the first option applies it correctly.

39. (B) Bad company (poor सङ्गतिः) has spread the fault दीर्घसूत्रता (procrastination) to the child — exactly the influence the chapter warns of. It is not good company nor knowledge-building, it disproves the 'no influence' claim, and copying procrastination is no act of humility (विनय).

40. (D) दीर्घ-सूत्र-ता literally 'long-thread-ness' → dragging a task out → procrastination (a fault). दीर्घ-आयुष् = 'long life-span' (a blessing). The reverse mapping is wrong, and they are not synonyms — the shared दीर्घ does not make their meanings the same.

41. (D) Although both share दीर्घ, सूत्र ('thread' → dragging out) vs आयुष् ('life') flip the meaning. So one must read the whole compound; the first word alone does not fix the sense, same first words need not match, and the second member clearly matters here.

42. (D) दीर्घायुष् = 'long life', a blessing — it is not among the six faults (the procrastination fault is दीर्घसूत्रता, a different word). It is not a synonym for laziness (आलस्यम्) nor the name of the pot (घटः).

43. (A) सुभाषित-रसम् means 'the rasa (essence) of well-spoken sayings' — the first member stands in a genitive-type relation to the second, i.e. a tatpurusha. It is not 'X and Y' (that would be dvandva), not mere apposition, and a compound's type is not a vocative.

44. (A) 'By six' needs the instrumental of षष् (six) → षड्भिः, replacing पञ्चभिः ('by five'). It cannot stay पञ्चभिः (that is 'by five'); षष्ठी names the genitive CASE (not a number-form here); and षट्सु is locative ('in six'), not the 'by' (instrumental) sense.

45. (C) पञ्चभिः = instrumental plural of पञ्चन् (five) — 'by five (qualities)'. 'Six' is षष् → षड्भिः, 'ten' दश → दशभिः, 'three' त्रि → त्रिभिः. The number must match the count of five va-qualities.

46. (B) विद्या (feminine ā-stem) → instrumental विद्यया; वस्त्र (neuter a-stem) → instrumental वस्त्रेण. Different stem-classes give different endings (-या, -ेण) but the SAME case and meaning ('by'). They are not different cases, both are singular here, and विद्यया is a noun-form, not a verb.

47. (B) 'By humility' is the instrumental विनयेन (neuter/masc a-stem → -ेन), matching वस्त्रेण/ज्ञानेन. विनयः is nominative ('humility is...'), विनयाय is dative ('for humility'), and विनयस्य is genitive ('of humility') — none expresses the means 'by'.

48. (A) 'By water' (the means) is the instrumental जलेन — exactly as the verse cleans गात्राणि जलेन. जलम् is nominative ('water is purified'), जलाय dative ('for water'), and जले locative ('in water', a place sense) — none gives the 'by/with means' force.

49. (C) केन ('by what') is instrumental, so the answer naming the MEANS is also instrumental: ज्ञानेन, जलेन, सत्येन, तपसा. A nominative (बुद्धिः) would name the thing purified, a genitive (मनुष्याणाम्) shows possession, and a vocative is an address — none answers 'by what'.

50. (C) कतिभिः ('by how many', instrumental) expects an instrumental-plural number → पञ्चभिः. केन expects an instrumental (not nominative), केषाम् ('of whom', genitive) expects a genitive (मनुष्याणाम्, not instrumental), and कस्मै ('for whom', dative) expects a dative (मनुष्याय, not genitive). Only the first pairing is right.

51. (A) नरः (nominative) is the subject: 'the man is honoured'. The means is the instrumental (पञ्चभिः वकारैः), the recipient would be dative, and an address would be vocative (हे नर). Subject = nominative.

52. (D) A copula-style equation ('X is Y') puts both X (आलस्यम्) and the predicate noun (रिपुः) in the nominative: 'laziness is an enemy'. Neither is the other's object (no transitive verb), रिपुः is not a means (that would be instrumental), and possession would be genitive.

53. (B) The MEANS of purifying takes the instrumental (जलेन, ज्ञानेन). The POSSESSOR ('whose limbs') takes the genitive (e.g. मनुष्यस्य गात्राणि). Swapping them, or using nominative/dative for the means, misassigns the case roles — only the first mapping matches Sanskrit usage.

54. (A) सङ्गतिः = company. प्रेरकः is an inspirer (not an enemy), रिपुः is an enemy (not an inspirer — the two distractors swap each other), and घटः is a pot (not procrastination, which is दीर्घसूत्रता).

55. (B) The six faults are निद्रा, तन्द्रा, भयम्, क्रोधः, आलस्यम्, दीर्घसूत्रता. आलस्यम्, तन्द्रा and क्रोधः are all faults; विनय (humility) is one of the five 'va' VIRTUES, so it is the odd one out.

56. (D) The four means are जल (water), सत्य (truth), तपस् (austerity), ज्ञान (knowledge). वस्त्रम् (dress) is one of the five 'va' qualities, not a purification means, so it is the odd one out; water, truth and austerity all purify a part.

57. (A) नरः is honoured by the five va-qualities (पञ्चभिः वकारैः पूजितः), and the six faults are to be given up by one desiring भूति (prosperity). The distractors swap virtues for faults, mix in purification means, or replace prosperity with sleep/anger/enemy.

58. (A) Three separate errors: (1) there are SIX faults; (2) the intellect (बुद्धिः) is cleaned by ज्ञानेन, not जलेन (water cleans the body); (3) दीर्घसूत्रता is procrastination, while 'long life' is दीर्घायुष्. So it is three, not one, two, or zero.

59. (C) The chapter joins gaining the five virtues with abandoning the six faults, and joins steady gradual effort (drop fills pot) with the right means for each goal (purification verse) — a 'both/and'. It is not an either/or, not a single method with no effort, and good company alone does not give instant results.

60. (D) नित्यम् ('daily') + पिबामः ('we drink') + सुभाषितरसम् ('nectar of wise sayings') urges DAILY absorption of wisdom, mirroring क्रमशः पूर्यते घटः (gradual accumulation). Once-in-a-lifetime or exam-only reading contradicts नित्यम्, and water purifies the body — knowledge (not water) feeds the intellect.
