Chapter 8: हितं मनोहारि च दुर्लभं वचः (Hitam Manohari cha Durlabham Vachah)

Paper 3 — (progressively harder)

Subject	Sanskrit (NCERT Class 7, Deepakam)
Chapter	8 — हितं मनोहारि च दुर्लभं वचः (Hitam Manohari cha Durlabham Vachah)
Total Questions	60 (Multiple Choice, single correct)
Maximum Marks	240
Suggested Time	90 minutes

Marking scheme: +4 for each correct answer · -1 for each wrong answer · 0 if unattempted.

Instructions: Each question has four options (A), (B), (C), (D); exactly one is correct. Watch the classic traps: च is the conjunction 'AND' (both useful AND pleasing), never 'or' (वा); दुर्लभम् is RARE / hard-to-find, not impossible (अशक्यम्); विद्या is gathered क्षणशः (moment by moment) while अर्थ is gathered कणशः (particle by particle) — the adverbs do not swap; -शस् builds distributive adverbs ('by units of'), not datives; a क्रियावान् (doer) is praised over a विकथन (boaster), i.e. कर्म over कथन; सूक्तिः (सु+उक्ति, a good saying / सुभाषितम्) only looks like सूक्ष्म (subtle) — different roots; and through all the counsel on speech and effort the chapter's deepest value remains शीलम् (character). Do not write on this paper — mark answers on your answer sheet.

1. The title हितं मनोहारि च दुर्लभं वचः sets a 'both-and' standard for ideal speech. Which everyday utterance best meets BOTH halves of that standard at once?

- (A) A flatterer praising a lazy student's poor work to make him smile
- (B) A coach harshly shouting a correct but humiliating rebuke at a player
- (C) A friend silently nodding without saying anything useful or pleasant
- (D) A teacher gently telling a struggling student a true, helpful correction in encouraging words

2. वचः in हितं मनोहारि च दुर्लभं वचः is the subject the three adjectives describe. Grammatically, हितम्, मनोहारि and दुर्लभम् must therefore agree with वचः in being:

- (A) masculine plural nouns standing in apposition
- (B) neuter singular adjectives qualifying the neuter noun वचः

(C) feminine singular verbs governing वचः

(D) indeclinable adverbs that do not agree with any noun

3. A student renders the verse as 'Useful OR pleasing speech is easy to find.' This single translation contains how many independent errors against the original?

(A) None; the rendering is acceptable (B) One: only the च = 'or' error

(C) Two: 'or' for च (which is 'and'), and 'easy to find' for दुर्लभम् (which is 'rare/hard to find')

(D) Three: 'or', 'easy', and a wrong meaning for वचः

4. Arrange the three qualities of ideal speech from EASIEST to achieve to HARDEST, given the verse's logic:

(A) speech that is only हितम् (easiest), speech that is only मनोहारि, speech that is both हितम् and मनोहारि (hardest, दुर्लभम्)

(B) speech that is both (easiest), then only pleasing, then only useful (hardest)

(C) all three are equally easy

(D) only मनोहारि is easy; both 'only useful' and 'both together' are equally impossible

5. If we keep हितम् but replace मनोहारि with its opposite, the resulting speech would be:

(A) exactly the दुर्लभम् ideal of the verse (B) useless and pleasing

(C) both useful and pleasing, the ideal itself

(D) useful but harsh / unpleasant — and so NOT the rare ideal the verse praises

6. The verse's deeper message about effort is best captured by which inference?

(A) Because the ideal is rare (not impossible), it is worth the sustained effort to cultivate speech that is both useful and pleasing

(B) Because the ideal is impossible, one should not bother trying

(C) Because the ideal is common, no special effort is needed

(D) Because only pleasing speech matters, one may ignore usefulness

7. In हितं मनोहारि च, the word च is positioned AFTER मनोहारि. In Sanskrit this placement of च typically signals that it joins:

(A) only the word that comes after it, never the one before

(B) two whole sentences, not two adjectives

(C) the item it follows (मनोहारि) to the preceding item (हितम्) — 'useful and pleasing'

(D) nothing; postposed च is merely decorative and meaningless

8. Which substitution would MOST change the verse's standard from demanding to lenient?

(A) Replacing दुर्लभम् with another word also meaning 'rare'

(B) Replacing वचः with another word also meaning 'speech'

(C) Replacing च with वा, turning 'useful and pleasing' into 'useful or pleasing'

(D) Replacing मनोहारि with another word also meaning 'pleasing'

9. Sanskrit marks 'and', 'or' and the interrogative 'what' with distinct words. Which mapping is fully correct?

- (A) च = and; वा = or; का/किम् = what/which (interrogative)
(B) च = or; वा = and; किम् = and (C) वा = and; च = what; किम् = or
(D) च = what; का = and; वा = or

10. When च follows a word ending in a vowel, it stays a separate enclitic 'च'. In मनोहारि च, why is no vowel-sandhi merger written between मनोहारि and च?

- (A) च is a verb, and verbs never undergo sandhi
(B) मनोहारि ends in a consonant, so sandhi is forbidden
(C) च begins with a consonant (च), so there is no vowel meeting a vowel to trigger vowel-sandhi here
(D) च always blocks all sandhi wherever it appears

11. Consider two readings: (i) 'speech useful and pleasing is rare'; (ii) 'speech useful or pleasing is rare'. Which reading is self-consistent with calling such speech दुर्लभम्?

- (A) Reading (ii), because either-or speech is naturally rare
(B) Both equally, since दुर्लभम् fits any reading
(C) Neither, because दुर्लभम् contradicts both readings
(D) Reading (i), because requiring BOTH qualities is genuinely rare, matching दुर्लभम्

12. A debater argues: 'Since the verse says वचः is दुर्लभम्, ALL speech is rare.' The flaw is that the verse calls rare only:

- (A) all speech without exception
(B) speech that is simultaneously हितम् and मनोहारि — not speech in general
(C) speech that is merely loud (D) speech that is purely pleasing

13. दुर्लभम् is built from the prefix दुर्- (dur-) plus a root sense of 'obtaining'. The prefix दुर्- here conveys:

- (A) absolute impossibility — 'cannot ever be obtained'
(B) difficulty — 'hard to obtain' (rather than absolute negation)
(C) plenty — 'easily and abundantly obtained' (D) no meaning at all; दुर्- is empty here

14. Which contrast correctly separates दुर्लभम् from अशक्यम्?

- (A) दुर्लभम् = impossible; अशक्यम् = rare but possible
(B) both mean exactly the same thing
(C) दुर्लभम् = rare but attainable with effort; अशक्यम् = impossible, not attainable at all
(D) दुर्लभम् = easy; अशक्यम् = pleasing

15. If the poet had truly meant such speech could NEVER exist, the most accurate single word to use would have been:

- (A) दुर्लभम् (rare) (B) अशक्यम् (impossible)
(C) मनोहारि (pleasing) (D) सुलभम् (easily obtained)

16. सुलभम् and दुर्लभम् share the element -लभम् ('to be obtained') but differ in their prefixes. This pair shows that:

- (A) both prefixes mean the same, so the words are synonyms
- (B) सु- ('easy/good') and दुर्- ('hard/bad') are opposite prefixes, making सुलभम् 'easy to get' and दुर्लभम् 'hard to get'
- (C) the prefixes are meaningless and the words mean the same as -लभम् alone
- (D) सु- means 'hard' and दुर्- means 'easy', so the meanings are reversed

17. A motivational poster reads 'Excellence is दुर्लभम्, so keep practising.' This use of दुर्लभम् is:

- (A) wrong, because दुर्लभम् means impossible, so practice is pointless
- (B) appropriate, because दुर्लभम् implies rare-but-reachable, which justifies continued practice
- (C) wrong, because दुर्लभम् means common, so practice is unnecessary
- (D) wrong, because दुर्लभम् describes only speech, never excellence

18. Which student attitude does the chapter's choice of दुर्लभम् (over अशक्यम्) most directly encourage?

- (A) Resignation: impossible goals should be abandoned
- (B) Complacency: common goals need no effort
- (C) Persistence: rare goals reward steady, patient effort
- (D) Indifference: speech does not matter

19. हितम् and अहितम् differ by the prefix अ-. In this pair अ- functions as:

- (A) a negating prefix, turning 'beneficial' into 'not beneficial / harmful'
- (B) an intensifier, turning 'beneficial' into 'very beneficial'
- (C) a pluralising prefix, making 'benefits'
- (D) a meaningless decorative syllable

20. मनोहारि is analysed as मनः ('mind/heart') + हारि ('stealing/captivating'). The literal sense it builds is:

- (A) 'mind-harming' = confusing, hence harsh
- (B) 'mind-giving' = instructive, hence useful
- (C) 'heart-hiding' = secretive, hence subtle
- (D) 'heart-stealing' = captivating, hence pleasing

21. Map each quality to what it primarily appeals to: हितम् appeals to the listener's ____, while मनोहारि appeals to the listener's ____.

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| (A) feelings/heart; benefit/welfare | (B) wealth; wealth |
| (C) boastfulness; curiosity | (D) benefit/welfare; feelings/heart |

22. In the sentence तस्य वचः हितम् अस्ति ('His speech is beneficial'), the adjective हितम् is in which relationship to वचः?

- (A) It governs वचः as a transitive verb
- (B) It is a predicate adjective agreeing with वचः in neuter singular

(C) It is the genitive of वचः

(D) It is an adverb modifying अस्ति

23. क्षणशः derives from क्षण ('moment') + -शस्, and कणशः from कण ('particle/grain') + -शस्. The suffix -शस् uniformly contributes the sense:

- (A) 'all together at once' — a collective adverb
- (B) 'toward / for the sake of' — a dative sense
- (C) 'unit by unit' — a distributive 'by each/per unit' adverb
- (D) 'away from' — an ablative 'separation' sense

24. Both क्षणशः and कणशः end in -शः and function as adverbs. Grammatically this means they:

- (A) must take the same gender as the noun they describe
- (B) are nouns declined in the instrumental case
- (C) are finite verbs agreeing with a subject
- (D) do not change form to agree with any noun's gender, number or case

25. Which sentence correctly pairs each adverb with the right noun-process from the verse?

- (A) विद्या grows कणशः; अर्थः grows क्षणशः
- (B) विद्या grows क्षणशः (moment by moment); अर्थः grows कणशः (particle by particle)
- (C) both विद्या and अर्थः grow क्षणशः
- (D) both विद्या and अर्थः grow कणशः

26. If a third saying read 'जलं बिन्दुशः मिलति' ('water collects drop by drop'), the word बिन्दुशः would be formed by the SAME pattern as:

- (A) हितम् — an adjective agreeing with a noun
- (B) अस्ति — a finite verb form
- (C) क्षणशः / कणशः — noun + -शस् giving a 'unit by unit' adverb
- (D) तस्य — a genitive pronoun

27. The deeper lesson uniting क्षणशः (for knowledge) and कणशः (for wealth) is that great results come from:

- (A) patient accumulation of small, regular increments over time
- (B) a single sudden windfall requiring no effort
- (C) luck rather than any steady effort
- (D) boasting about results one has not yet achieved

28. Why is it apt that KNOWLEDGE is paired with क्षणशः (moments) while WEALTH is paired with कणशः (particles)?

- (A) Both are gathered through units of time, so the pairing is arbitrary
- (B) Knowledge needs particles and wealth needs moments; the verse simply reversed them
- (C) Knowledge is gathered through units of TIME (moments of study); wealth through small physical UNITS (grains/coins) saved
- (D) Neither pairing has any rationale; the words were chosen for rhyme only

29. A student studies attentively for ten minutes daily for a year. Which verse-adverb best describes how his knowledge grew?

- (A) कणशः — particle by particle (B) क्षणशः — moment by moment
(C) all at once in a single day (D) by boasting about it

30. A shopkeeper saves a few coins from every sale until he can buy new stock. Which adverb from the verse best fits his savings, and why?

- (A) क्षणशः, because money is a unit of time
(B) क्षणशः, because saving happens in moments
(C) कणशः, because wealth accumulates particle/grain by grain (here, coin by coin)
(D) neither, because saving is unrelated to the verse

31. The verse's pairing of विद्या and अर्थः with distributive adverbs primarily teaches that both knowledge and wealth:

- (A) are equally worthless and not worth gathering
(B) come only to those who boast loudest
(C) are interchangeable and mean the same thing
(D) demand patient, regular effort and cannot be had instantly

32. क्रियावान् is formed from क्रिया ('action') + the possessive suffix -वत्/-वान्. The suffix -वान् here means:

- (A) 'lacking / without' — so क्रियावान् = 'one without action'
(B) 'possessing / having' — so क्रियावान् = 'one who has action = a doer'
(C) 'against / opposing' — so क्रियावान् = 'one opposed to action'
(D) 'small amount of' — so क्रियावान् = 'one with a little action'

33. क्रिया ('action') itself comes from the verbal root कृ ('to do/make'). This connection shows that क्रियावान् most fundamentally praises:

- (A) one who actually does / performs deeds (B) one who merely talks about deeds
(C) one who avoids all activity (D) one who only plans but never starts

34. विकल्थन (boaster) and क्रियावान् (doer) form the chapter's key contrast. The single trait that separates them is:

- (A) the doer performs and lets results speak; the boaster talks up deeds (often undone)
(B) the doer is wealthier; the boaster is poorer
(C) the doer is curious; the boaster is character-less
(D) the doer is silent always; the boaster is useful

35. Two classmates finish a project: A quietly submits excellent work; B loudly announces how great his (unfinished) work will be. By the chapter's values:

- (A) B is the praiseworthy क्रियावान्; A is the विकल्थन
(B) A is the praiseworthy क्रियावान्; B is the criticised विकल्थन

- (C) both are विकृत्यन् because both turned in projects
(D) both are क्रियावान् because both spoke about the work

36. The doer-over-boaster preference is a special case of which broader Sanskrit value the chapter endorses?

- (A) कर्म (deeds) over mere कथन (talk) (B) कथन (talk) over कर्म (deeds)
(C) अर्थ (wealth) over विद्या (knowledge) (D) silence over both speech and action

37. Which proverb-style statement best summarises the क्रियावान्-over-विकृत्यन् teaching?

- (A) 'Promise loudly; deliver quietly or not at all.'
(B) 'A clever boast outweighs an honest deed.'
(C) 'Say nothing and do nothing; stay still.'
(D) 'Let your work speak louder than your words.'

38. A विकृत्यन् who promises grand results but never acts most clearly fails which of the chapter's standards?

- (A) He gathers wealth too slowly, कणशः instead of all at once
(B) He values कथन (talk) over कर्म (deeds), the reverse of the praised doer
(C) He shows too much कुतूहलम् (curiosity)(D) He has too much हितम् in his speech

39. सूक्तिः is formed by sandhi of सु ('well/good') + उक्तिः ('saying'). The vowel junction सु + उ produces:

- (A) सो- (a guttural diphthong), giving सोक्तिः(B) स्व- (with a semivowel), giving स्वक्तिः
(C) सू- (a long ऊ), since like vowels उ + उ combine into ऊ — giving सूक्तिः
(D) no change; the words stay सु उक्तिः with a gap

40. सूक्तिः and सूक्ष्म both begin with the sound सू, yet mean different things. The safest way to keep them apart is to remember that:

- (A) both contain उक्ति, so both relate to speech
(B) सूक्ष्म contains उक्ति, so it means a refined saying
(C) सूक्तिः contains उक्ति ('saying'), so it is a GOOD SAYING; सूक्ष्म has no उक्ति and means SUBTLE/fine
(D) the shared सू- means they are exact synonyms

41. सूक्तिः is treated as a synonym of which chapter/term?

- (A) सुभाषितम् (a wise / well-spoken saying)(B) विकृत्यनम् (boasting)
(C) भाण्डागारः (treasure-trove) (D) कुतूहलम् (curiosity)

42. सुभाषितम् parallels सूक्तिः in structure. सुभाषितम् breaks into:

- (A) सु ('six') + भाषितम् ('faults') = 'six faults'
(B) सु ('well') + भाषितम् ('spoken') = 'that which is well-spoken'
(C) सुभा ('light') + षितम् ('hidden') = 'hidden light'
(D) सुभाष ('a name') + इतम् = a proper noun only

- 43. If a teacher writes a सूक्तिः on the board, students should expect:
- (A) a boast about the teacher's own greatness
 - (B) a list of the school's stored treasures
 - (C) a brief, well-phrased wise saying worth remembering
 - (D) a subtle riddle with no useful meaning
- 44. कुतूहलम् is glossed in the chapter as कौतुकम् and is a close cousin of जिज्ञासा (from Chapter 1). The common thread among all three is:
- (A) eagerness to know — the learner's curiosity
 - (B) eagerness to boast — the talker's pride
 - (C) eagerness to rest — the lazy person's wish
 - (D) eagerness for wealth — the merchant's greed
- 45. जिज्ञासा is built from a desiderative of the root ज्ञा ('to know'), literally 'the wish to know'. Its kinship with कुतूहलम् shows the chapter prizes curiosity as the engine of:
- (A) gathering wealth कणशः (particle by particle)
 - (B) boasting about achievements
 - (C) avoiding all effort
 - (D) gathering knowledge क्षणशः (moment by moment)
- 46. Which behaviour best displays कुतूहलम् as the chapter intends it?
- (A) A child boasts of knowing everything and asks nothing
 - (B) A child refuses to study, calling it boring
 - (C) A child hoards coins and ignores lessons
 - (D) A child keeps asking 'why' and seeks out books to find the answer
- 47. भाण्डागारः (treasure-trove / storehouse) is applied in the chapter as a metaphor for:
- (A) a precious store — e.g. of knowledge or good sayings — to be valued and accumulated
 - (B) a heap of boasts to be admired
 - (C) a pile of useless words to be discarded
 - (D) an impossible goal never to be reached
- 48. Why is भाण्डागारः an especially fitting metaphor for knowledge gathered क्षणशः?
- (A) A storehouse is filled instantly, like a sudden windfall of knowledge
 - (B) A storehouse fills item by item over time, just as knowledge accumulates moment by moment
 - (C) A storehouse holds only wealth, never knowledge
 - (D) A storehouse is empty, like a boaster's claims
- 49. A vast personal library, lovingly built book by book over many years, is best described in the chapter's terms as:
- (A) a भाण्डागारः of विद्या (a treasure-trove of knowledge), filled क्षणशः
 - (B) a भाण्डागारः of विकल्थन (a store of boasts)
 - (C) a sign of अशक्यम् (impossibility)
 - (D) a heap of सूक्ष्म riddles with no value
- 50. शीलम् (revisited from an earlier chapter) means 'character / moral conduct'. The chapter's wider claim about शीलम् is that:

- (A) wealth outweighs character (B) clever speech can replace character
(C) character matters only for kings
(D) good character outweighs outward gifts like clever speech or wealth

51. A person speaks beautifully (मनोहारि), gives useful counsel (हितम्), and is wealthy (अर्थवान्) — yet is dishonest. By the chapter's deepest standard he still lacks:

- (A) वचः (the power of speech) (B) कुतूहलम् (curiosity)
(C) शीलम् (good character) (D) भाण्डागारः (a treasure-store)

52. That शीलम् recurs across chapters, alongside the praise of true speech and real deeds, reveals the Deepakam's unifying ideal of:

- (A) an outwardly impressive person regardless of inner conduct
(B) a wealthy person measured only by riches
(C) an inner-good person whose conduct, speech and action all express good character
(D) a clever talker measured only by eloquence

53. Reading the speech-verse and the क्षणशः-कणशः verse together, the shared moral is that worthwhile things are:

- (A) easy and instantly obtained (B) truly impossible and so not worth pursuing
(C) gained mainly by loud boasting
(D) rare/hard yet attainable through patient, sustained effort

54. Which set of four meanings is entirely CORRECT?

- (A) दुर्लभम् = rare; च = and; क्रियावान् = doer; सूक्तिः = good saying
(B) दुर्लभम् = impossible; च = or; क्रियावान् = boaster; सूक्तिः = subtle
(C) दुर्लभम् = rare; च = or; क्रियावान् = doer; सूक्तिः = subtle
(D) दुर्लभम् = common; च = and; क्रियावान् = boaster; सूक्तिः = good saying

55. Which adverb–noun assignment is the ONLY fully correct one?

- (A) विद्या — क्षणशः (moment by moment); अर्थः — कणशः (particle by particle)
(B) विद्या — कणशः; अर्थः — क्षणशः (C) विद्या — क्षणशः; अर्थः — क्षणशः
(D) विद्या — कणशः; अर्थः — कणशः

56. Which pair correctly matches a word with its OPPOSITE/contrast in the chapter?

- (A) हितम् (useful) ↔ मनोहारि (pleasing)
(B) सूक्तिः (good saying) ↔ सुभाषितम् (wise saying)
(C) क्षणशः (moment) ↔ कणशः (particle) (D) क्रियावान् (doer) ↔ विकथन (boaster)

57. A student writes: 'च = or, so the verse asks for useful OR pleasing speech; दुर्लभम् = impossible, so it can never be found; and क्रियावान् = a great talker.' How many of these three claims are wrong?

- (A) Only the च claim is wrong (B) Only the दुर्लभम् claim is wrong
(C) None is wrong; all three are correct (D) All three are wrong

58. The fully correct restatement of हितं मनोहारि च दुर्लभं वचः is:

- (A) Speech that is both useful (हितम्) AND pleasing (मनोहारि) is rare (दुर्लभम्) yet attainable
- (B) Speech that is either useful or pleasing is common
- (C) Useful speech is impossible to produce (D) Pleasing speech is always harmful

59. If you had to teach the chapter's entire ethic in one sentence, the best summary would be:

- (A) Speak loudly, get rich quickly, boast of your deeds, and ignore character
- (B) Speak words both useful and pleasing, gather knowledge and wealth patiently bit by bit, act rather than boast, and let good character guide all
- (C) Stay silent, avoid effort, and trust luck for everything
- (D) Value pleasing speech alone and disregard usefulness and conduct

60. Across the chapter, the vocabulary सूक्तिः, कुतूहलम्, भाण्डागारः and शीलम् collectively endorse a life built on:

- (A) boasting, laziness, hoarded wealth, and pride
- (B) silence, idleness, luck, and indifference
- (C) harsh speech, greed, secrecy, and impossibility
- (D) wise speech, curiosity, treasured knowledge, and good character

Solutions — Sanskrit (Class 7), Chapter 8: हितं मनोहारि च दुर्लभं वचः (Hitam Manohari cha Durlabham Vachah) — Paper 3

Paper 3 — (progressively harder)

Marking: +4 correct, –1 wrong, 0 unattempted. Maximum marks 240.

Worked Solutions

1. (D) The verse praises speech that is both हितम् (beneficial) AND मनोहारि (pleasing) together — दुर्लभम् precisely because both must hold. A true helpful correction said in encouraging words is both useful and agreeable. Pleasant flattery of poor work is मनोहारि but not हितम् (it does no good). A humiliating rebuke may be हितम् in content but is not मनोहारि. Silence is neither. Only the first satisfies both qualities.

2. (B) वचः (speech) is a neuter noun; an adjective in Sanskrit agrees with its noun in gender, number and case. हितम्, मनोहारि and दुर्लभम् are all neuter singular adjectives describing वचः. They are not nouns in apposition, not verbs (वचः takes no verbal agreement), and not indeclinable adverbs — they inflect to match वचः.

3. (C) च means 'and', so 'or' is one error. दुर्लभम् means 'rare / hard to find', so 'easy to find' is a second, opposite error. वचः ('speech') is rendered correctly as 'speech', so that is not a third error. Exactly two independent mistakes are present.

4. (A) Either single quality alone is comparatively easy to produce; the verse's whole point is that combining both — being useful AND pleasing at the same moment — is दुर्लभम् (rare/hard). So 'both together' is the hardest, while either quality singly is easier. 'Both is easiest' inverts the verse; 'all equal' ignores why the combination is praised; and 'both together' is hard, not impossible.

5. (D) The opposite of मनोहारि (pleasing) is harsh/unpleasant. Keeping हितम् (useful) but making it harsh yields useful-but-harsh speech. Because the ideal requires BOTH qualities, useful-but-harsh fails the मनोहारि half and is not the दुर्लभम् ideal. It is not the ideal, is still useful (not useless), and lacks the 'pleasing' quality, so it is not 'both'.

6. (A) दुर्लभम् signals 'rare but attainable', which is an invitation to strive, not to surrender. The verse therefore motivates sustained effort. 'Impossible, so don't try' confuses दुर्लभम् with अशक्यम्; 'common, no effort' contradicts दुर्लभम्; and dropping usefulness ignores the हितम् half demanded by च.

7. (C) The enclitic च follows the last of the items it conjoins, linking it back to the earlier item(s): हितम् ... मनोहारि च = 'useful and pleasing'. It is not meaningless, it joins the adjectives (not whole sentences here), and it gathers the preceding item, not only what follows.

8. (C) Swapping च ('and') for वा ('or') lowers a strict 'both qualities at once' bar to an easy 'either one will do' bar — a major loosening. Replacing दुर्लभम्, वचः or मनोहारि with exact synonyms keeps the meaning unchanged, so those do not alter the standard.

9. (A) च is the conjunction 'and', वा is the disjunction 'or', and the किम्-stem (का feminine, किम् neuter) is interrogative 'what/which'. The other mappings scramble these distinct functions; mistaking च for 'or' is exactly the verse-weakening error the chapter warns against.

10. (C) Vowel-sandhi (e.g. इ + अ) needs a vowel ending meeting a vowel beginning. च begins with the consonant च्, so although मनोहारि ends in the vowel -इ, no vowel-vowel junction arises and the words stay separate. च is a particle (not a verb), मनोहारि does end in a vowel, and च does not universally block sandhi.

11. (D) Speech that is merely useful OR merely pleasing is common, so reading (ii) clashes with दुर्लभम्. Demanding both at once (reading i) is what makes such speech rare, so only (i) is consistent with दुर्लभम्. Hence च must be 'and'.

12. (B) दुर्लभम् qualifies the specific speech defined by हितम् + मनोहारि च, i.e. the both-useful-and-pleasing kind, not speech as such. Ordinary or merely-pleasing or loud speech is common. The debater drops the two adjectives and overgeneralises.

13. (B) दुर्- means 'difficult / bad / hard-to', so दुर्लभम् = 'hard to obtain = rare'. It expresses difficulty, not absolute negation; the word for 'impossible' is अशक्यम्. It is the opposite of 'easily obtained', and the prefix is meaningful.

14. (C) दुर्लभम् marks something rare yet reachable through effort; अशक्यम् (a- 'not' + शक्य 'doable') marks the genuinely impossible. They are not synonyms, the meanings are not reversed, and neither means 'easy' or 'pleasing'. The chapter deliberately uses दुर्लभम्, encouraging striving.

15. (B) 'Never possible' is अशक्यम्. The poet instead chose दुर्लभम् (rare/hard), which leaves the ideal attainable. मनोहारि means pleasing, and सुलभम् ('easy to obtain') is the very opposite of what would be meant. The word choice itself proves the ideal is not declared impossible.

16. (B) सु- conveys ease/goodness, दुर्- conveys difficulty/badness. Attached to the same -लभम् they yield opposites: सुलभम् 'easily obtained' vs दुर्लभम् 'hard to obtain (rare)'. The prefixes are not synonymous, not empty, and not reversed in meaning.

17. (B) Since दुर्लभम् means rare yet attainable, urging continued practice fits perfectly. It does not mean impossible (that is अशक्यम्), nor common (that would make practice needless), and the adjective can describe any rare-but-reachable thing, not only speech.

18. (C) Labelling the ideal दुर्लभम् (rare but attainable) frames it as a goal worth working toward, encouraging persistence. Resignation belongs to अशक्यम्; complacency belongs to सुलभम्/common; indifference contradicts a chapter all about cultivating fine speech.

19. (A) The prefix अ- (a-) negates: हितम् 'beneficial' → अहितम् 'not beneficial / harmful'. It does not intensify, does not pluralise, and is not decorative. This same negating अ- appears in अशक्यम् ('not doable = impossible').

20. (D) मनः + हारि literally means 'that which carries off / captivates the heart' — pleasing/charming. It is not 'mind-harming' (that would be unpleasant), not 'mind-giving', and not 'heart-hiding/subtle' (that confuses it with सूक्ष्म). So मनोहारि = pleasing.

21. (D) हितम् (beneficial) serves the listener's welfare; मनोहारि (heart-captivating) appeals to their feelings. The reversal swaps the two qualities. Neither concerns wealth, and neither is about boastfulness or curiosity.

22. (B) हितम् here predicates a quality of वचः and agrees with it (neuter singular nominative). It is not a verb (अस्ति is the verb), not a genitive (तस्य is the genitive), and not an adverb. Adjective–noun agreement in gender/number/case is the relationship.

23. (C) -शस् forms distributive adverbs meaning 'by units of': क्षणशः 'moment by moment', कणशः 'particle by particle'. It is the opposite of 'all at once', and it is adverbial, not a dative ('for') or ablative ('from') case ending.

24. (D) Adverbs in -शस्/-शः are indeclinable: they keep one fixed form and never inflect to agree with a noun. They are not adjectives (no gender agreement), not declined nouns, and not verbs. This is why each simply attaches to its noun-action unchanged.

25. (B) The standard pairing is विद्या (knowledge) gathered क्षणशः (moment by moment) and अर्थः (wealth) gathered कणशः (particle by particle) — each noun gets its own adverb. Swapping them or using one adverb for both breaks the verse's careful one-adverb-per-noun structure.

26. (C) बिन्दु ('drop') + -शस् → बिन्दुशः 'drop by drop' is exactly the distributive-adverb pattern of क्षणशः and कणशः. It is not an agreeing adjective like हितम्, not a verb like अस्ति, and not a case-form of a pronoun like तस्य.

27. (A) Moment-by-moment and particle-by-particle both stress steady, incremental gathering — small consistent efforts adding up. They explicitly reject sudden windfalls, mere luck, and (in the chapter's wider theme) empty boasting in place of real accumulation.

28. (C) क्षण ('moment') is a unit of time, fitting study, which accumulates over moments; कण ('particle/grain') is a small material unit, fitting wealth, which accrues coin by coin. The pairing is meaningful, not arbitrary, not reversed, and not merely for sound.

29. (B) Daily attentive study accumulates knowledge over units of time, i.e. क्षणशः ('moment by moment'). कणशः ('particle by particle') is reserved for wealth; the gain was not sudden; and boasting gathers nothing. So क्षणशः is right.

30. (C) Wealth in the verse is gathered कणशः ('particle by particle') — coin by coin matches this material, unit-by-unit saving. क्षणशः refers to time-moments and is paired with knowledge, not money. The verse's lesson on patient accumulation does apply, so 'neither' is wrong.

31. (D) Both adverbs stress gradual, patient gathering, so the lesson is that knowledge and wealth alike require steady effort over time. The verse honours, not dismisses, both; boasting gathers nothing; and knowledge and wealth remain distinct things, not interchangeable.

32. (B) The -वत्/-वान् suffix is possessive ('having'), so क्रियावान् = 'action-possessing = a doer'. It does not mean 'lacking' (that sense uses अ- or हीन), nor 'opposing', nor 'a little'. The doer is praised over the mere talker.

33. (A) क्रिया is the action-noun of कृ 'to do'; क्रियावान् ('possessing action') therefore praises the actual doer of deeds. It is the opposite of a mere talker (विकल्थन), of one who avoids activity, and of one who only plans. Doing, not saying, is the point.

34. (A) The contrast is action versus mere talk: क्रियावान् acts, विकल्थन brags. It is not about wealth, not about curiosity vs character, and the doer is not 'always silent' (he simply lets deeds, not boasts, do the talking — and the boaster is certainly not 'useful').

35. (B) A acts and delivers — a क्रियावान् (doer). B brags about undone work — a विकल्थन (boaster). The chapter praises the doer, so A is commended and B criticised. The roles are not reversed, and merely 'turning in' or 'speaking' does not collapse the doer–boaster distinction, which turns on deeds versus brag.

36. (A) Praising the doer reflects the general value of कर्म (deeds) above कथन (mere talk). It is not the reverse, not a wealth-over-knowledge claim, and not a counsel of total silence — the chapter still prizes हितम् मनोहारि speech, only not empty boasting.

37. (D) 'Let your work speak' captures action over boasting — the क्रियावान् ideal. Loud promises without delivery describe the very विकल्थन being criticised; valuing a boast over a deed inverts the lesson; and counselling total inaction contradicts a chapter that praises doing.

38. (B) The boaster's flaw is privileging talk over action — failing the कर्म-over-कथन standard. His fault is not slow wealth-gathering (कणशः is in fact the right way), not excess curiosity (a virtue), and certainly not 'too much beneficial speech' (an empty boast is the opposite of हितम् वचः).

39. (C) सु ends in उ and उक्ति begins with उ; like (savarna) vowels उ + उ coalesce into the long ऊ, yielding सू + उक्तिः = सूक्तिः. It is not a diphthong सो-, not a semivowel स्व-, and the vowels do not stay separate — sandhi merges them. So सूक्तिः = 'a good/well-spoken saying'.

40. (C) सूक्तिः = सु + उक्ति, literally a 'good saying'; सूक्ष्म means 'subtle/fine/minute' and contains no उक्ति element. They merely share the सू- sound. So सूक्ष्म is not about saying, and the words are not synonyms; the presence or absence of उक्ति is the reliable test.

41. (A) Both सूक्तिः (सु+उक्ति, 'good saying') and सुभाषितम् (सु+भाषित, 'well-spoken') name a wise saying, so they are synonyms. Boasting (विकल्थनम्), a treasure-store (भाण्डागारः) and curiosity (कुतूहलम्) are unrelated meanings.

42. (B) सुभाषितम् = सु ('well/good') + भाषितम् (past participle of भाष् 'to speak') = 'well-spoken (saying)', mirroring सु + उक्ति in सूक्तिः. The 'six faults' reading confuses सु with षट्; 'hidden light' and 'proper noun' are invented misparsings.

43. (C) सूक्तिः is a good/well-spoken saying — a memorable nugget of wisdom. It is not a boast (विकल्थन), not an inventory of treasure (भाण्डागार), and not a meaningless subtle riddle (confusing it with सूक्ष्म). So a wise saying is expected.

44. (A) कुतूहलम्, its gloss कौतुकम्, and जिज्ञासा all centre on the desire to know — curiosity, the learner's virtue. None concerns boasting, rest, or greed for wealth. This eagerness drives the patient gathering of knowledge.

45. (D) जिज्ञासा (wish to know) and कुतूहलम् (curiosity) fuel the moment-by-moment (क्षणशः) gathering of knowledge that the verse describes. Curiosity drives learning, not the particle-by-particle gathering of wealth, not boasting, and certainly not the avoidance of effort.

46. (D) कुतूहलम् is the eager wish to know — shown by the curious child who questions and seeks answers. Boasting of knowing all (asking nothing), refusing to study, and hoarding coins all lack curiosity; the first even contradicts it. So the questioning, book-seeking child fits.

47. (A) Calling knowledge or सूक्तis a भाण्डागारः frames them as a precious store worth accumulating and treasuring — fitting the क्षणशः/कणशः theme of patient gathering. It is not a store of boasts, not useless words to discard, and not an unreachable goal.

48. (B) A भाण्डागारः (storehouse) grows by additions over time, mirroring knowledge built up क्षणशः (moment by moment) — patient accumulation. It is not filled instantly, the metaphor is explicitly applied to knowledge (not only wealth), and a treasure-trove is full of value, unlike an empty boast.

49. (A) A library grown book by book over years is a treasure-trove (भाण्डागारः) of knowledge accumulated moment by moment (क्षणशः) — exactly the chapter's metaphor. It is not a store of boasts, not a mark of impossibility, and not meaningless subtle riddles.

50. (D) शीलम् (character/conduct) is held as the deepest value: it outranks outward advantages such as eloquence or riches. The chapter does not exalt wealth or speech above character, nor treat character as relevant only to kings — it is everyone's core virtue.

51. (C) Despite fine speech, useful counsel and wealth, dishonesty means he lacks शीलम् (good character) — the chapter's deepest value, which outranks all outward gifts. He clearly has speech, may have curiosity, and has wealth; what is missing is character.

52. (C) The repeated शीलम्, joined to honest speech (हितम् मनोहारि) and real deeds (क्रियावान्), points to a unified ideal: a person whose character shows in conduct, words and action. It is not about mere outward impressiveness, wealth alone, or eloquence alone.

53. (D) दुर्लभम् (rare but reachable) plus क्षणशः/कणशः (gathered bit by bit) together teach that worthwhile things take patient, sustained effort yet are attainable. They are not easy/instant, not impossible (that is अशक्यम्), and not won by boasting.

54. (A) Correct: दुर्लभम् 'rare', च 'and', क्रियावान् 'doer', सूक्तिः 'good saying'. The traps: दुर्लभम् is not 'impossible' (अशक्यम्) or 'common'; च is not 'or' (वा); क्रियावान् is not 'boaster' (विकल्थन); सूक्तिः is not 'subtle' (सूक्ष्म). Only the first set keeps every meaning right.

55. (A) Knowledge (विद्या) is gathered moment by moment (क्षणशः) and wealth (अर्थः) particle by particle (कणशः), one distinct adverb per noun. Swapping them, or using a single adverb for both, breaks the verse's structure.

56. (D) The chapter's explicit contrast is doer (क्रियावान्) versus boaster (विकल्थन). हितम् and मनोहारि are paired qualities, not opposites; सूक्तिः and सुभाषितम् are synonyms; क्षणशः and कणशः are parallel adverbs (different units, not opposites).

57. (D) च means 'and' (so 'or' is wrong); दुर्लभम् means 'rare/hard, not impossible' (so 'never found' is wrong); क्रियावान् means 'doer', the opposite of a talker/boaster (so 'great talker' is wrong). Every one of the three claims is mistaken.

58. (A) च demands BOTH qualities and दुर्लभम् means 'rare but reachable', so the correct restatement is 'both useful and pleasing speech is rare yet attainable'. The others drop the 'both' (using 'or'/'common'), confuse rare with impossible, or invent a harm claim.

59. (B) The chapter weaves together: हितम् मनोहारि speech, क्षणशः/कणशः patient gathering, क्रियावान् over विकल्थन (act, don't boast), and शीलम् (character) as the guide. The other summaries invert these — loud/quick/boastful, idle/luck-trusting, or pleasing-only — and miss the chapter's ethic.

60. (D) सूक्तिः (good saying), कुतूहलम् (curiosity), भाण्डागारः (treasured knowledge) and शीलम् (character) together commend wise speech, curiosity, valued learning and good character. They do not endorse boasting/laziness/hoarding, idleness/luck, or harshness/greed.
