Chapter 11: द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः (The Andaman Islands)

Paper 4 — (progressively harder)

Subject	Sanskrit (NCERT Class 7, Deepakam)
Chapter	11 — द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः (The Andaman Islands)
Total Questions	60 (Multiple Choice, single correct)
Maximum Marks	240
Suggested Time	90 minutes

Marking scheme: +4 for each correct answer · -1 for each wrong answer · 0 if unattempted.

Instructions: Each question has four options (A), (B), (C), (D); exactly one is correct. National-Olympiad traps: in द्वीपोऽण्डमानः the ऽ (अवग्रह) marks an ELIDED short अ after a visarga→ओ change, NOT a long-vowel merge, NOT an अनुस्वार, NOT a lost consonant — and crucially it is a sandhi of two SEPARATE words (a sentence join), not a samāsa; द्वीपेषु is सप्तमी बहुवचन expressing निर्धारण ('singling one out from among a group'), distinct from a locative of place-where-action-happens and from any nominative/instrumental; द्वि+अप्→द्वीप lengthens इ→ई (a fixed traditional form), it is NOT अ+अ nor यण्; रम्यः agrees with द्वीपः in liṅga-vacana-vibhakti (masc-sg-nom), so changing the head noun's gender/number forces रम्या/रम्यम्/रम्याः; सोढवान् is क्तवतु (past ACTIVE participle, agent-oriented, completed) vs the त-passive सोढः and the gerund सोढ्वा — and ह्→ढ in the stem is regular internal sandhi; दश वर्षाणि is द्वितीया of DURATION (नपुंसकलिङ्ग बहुवचन), not subject/instrument; कालापानी NAMES the Cellular Jail / sea-exile (काल carrying both 'black' and 'death/doom'), not a literal river; कारागार = कारा 'confinement' + (अ)गार 'house' (prison), the false-friend of Hindi कारखाना 'factory'; जनजाति = a legally-recognised indigenous tribe, not सामान्यजन; the Sentinelese are uncontacted and law-protected, not extinct. Do not write on this paper — mark answers on your answer sheet.

1. In द्वीपोऽण्डमानः the symbol ऽ appears. A student argues it must mark a missing consonant, because 'a vowel cannot simply vanish.' The correct reasoning is:

- (A) The ऽ marks a lost consonant न् that originally began the second word
- (B) The ऽ is a sign that two अ's merged into a long आ
- (C) The ऽ is an अनुस्वार placed to nasalise the preceding ओ
- (D) The ऽ (अवग्रह) marks an elided SHORT vowel अ; after द्वीपः+अण्डमानः the visarga became ओ and the following अ was then dropped, the loss being shown by ऽ

2. Which single statement about द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is true on BOTH counts — its formation type and its meaning?

- (A) It is a single तत्पुरुष compound and means 'the two-island Andaman'
- (B) It is a द्वन्द्व compound and means 'islands and the Andaman'
- (C) It is a single word formed by reduplication and means 'island after island'
- (D) It is a sandhi joining two separate words (a sentence-level join), and it means 'the island, the Andaman'

3. Applying the very rule of द्वीपः + अण्डमानः → द्वीपोऽण्डमानः to the pair सूर्यः + अस्तम् gives:

- (A) सूर्यास्तम् (the two vowels merge into आ) (B) सूर्यस्तम् (an अनुस्वार replaces the visarga)
- (C) सूर्योऽस्तम् (D) सूर्योस्तम् (no अवग्रह is written)

4. A reader reverses द्वीपोऽण्डमानः (sandhi-viccheda) and writes the second word as 'अण्डमानः'. Why is the initial अ restored even though the written title shows only ऽ at that spot?

- (A) Because every Sanskrit word must begin with अ, so one is added by rule
- (B) Because the avagraha is precisely the place-holder for the original short अ; undoing the sandhi means putting that elided अ back
- (C) Because the ओ of द्वीपो supplies an अ that migrates to the second word
- (D) Because the avagraha itself is read aloud as 'अ' and is simply rewritten

5. Consider द्वीपेषु रम्यः. If the chapter had instead singled out a feminine noun, e.g. नदीषु _____ गङ्गा ('among rivers, the lovely Ganga'), the adjective filling the blank would be:

- (A) रम्यः (adjectives keep one fixed form) (B) रम्या
- (C) रम्यम् (the neuter is the default form) (D) रम्याणि (it must match the plural नदीषु)

6. द्वीपेषु in the title is best classified as which use of the locative, given that the sentence picks out the Andaman from a wider set?

- (A) The locative of the place where an action physically occurs (अधिकरण of क्रिया)
- (B) निर्धारण — the locative of 'singling out one from among a group'
- (C) The locative of motion-towards a destination
- (D) The locative used as the agent of a passive verb

7. सोढवान् and a hypothetical passive form सोढः differ in voice. Which contrast is correct?

- (A) सोढवान् is agent-oriented ('he who bore'); सोढः would be patient-oriented ('that which was borne')
- (B) सोढवान् is patient-oriented ('the thing endured'); सोढः is agent-oriented ('the endurer')
- (C) Both are agent-oriented and interchangeable
- (D) सोढवान् is future and सोढः is present, differing only in tense not voice

8. In सावरकरः ... दश वर्षाणि ... सोढवान्, what is the precise grammatical role of दश वर्षाणि, and what does it add to the sense?

- (A) प्रथमा (nominative) — 'ten years' is what did the bearing
- (B) तृतीया (instrumental) — the suffering was borne 'by means of ten years'

(C) द्वितीया (accusative) of extent of time — it states the DURATION 'for ten years' over which the bearing continued

(D) सप्तमी (locative) — the action happened 'in the tenth year'

9. The stem सोढ in सोढवान् shows ढ where the root सृ has ह्. A student calls this a misprint for 'सहवान्'. The accurate explanation is:

(A) It is regular internal sandhi: the root-final aspirate combined with the participle's त produces the retroflex ढ, yielding सोढ

(B) It is a copying error; the correct stem is indeed सहवान्

(C) ढ was inserted because दश ('ten') lent its sound to the verb

(D) The ह् was simply deleted and ढ chosen at random for euphony

10. द्वि + अप् yields द्वीप. A grammarian objects: 'joining अ-final द्वि-... wait, द्वि ends in इ, so इ + अ should give a glide य (यण्), making द्व्यप्, not द्वीप.' The best response is:

(A) द्वीप is a fixed, traditionally lengthened formation in which the इ becomes long ई; the etymology ('water on two sides') is preserved even though the surface form does not follow ordinary यण्-sandhi

(B) The objection is decisive: the only valid form is द्व्यप्, and द्वीप is wrong

(C) द्वीप really comes from द्व + ईप and has nothing to do with अप्

(D) The अप् is silent, so no sandhi of any kind occurs and द्वीप is unrelated to 'water'

11. If a sentence read द्वीपौ रम्यौ (instead of the singular title), which two changes from द्वीपः रम्यः have BOTH occurred?

(A) The noun shifted to the dual द्वीपौ, and the adjective concorded to the dual रम्यौ

(B) The noun became plural and the adjective stayed singular

(C) Only the adjective changed; द्वीप never inflects for number

(D) The noun became feminine dual and the adjective neuter

12. बङ्गोपसागरे splits as बङ्ग + उप + सागर. A student parses उप as a verb-prefix meaning 'towards' and concludes it means 'the sea moving towards Bengal'. The correct parse is:

(A) उप doubles बङ्ग, giving 'the sea of the two Bengals'

(B) उप here is the preposition-sense 'near/beside', so बङ्ग+उप+सागर = 'the sea beside Bengal' = the Bay of Bengal

(C) सागर here means a mountain, so it is 'the peak near Bengal'

(D) उप negates सागर, so it means 'the dry land of Bengal, not a sea'

13. Why does the chapter's text retain the English loanword 'Cellular' rather than coin a pure-Sanskrit term?

(A) Because Sanskrit grammar forbids forming any compound for the idea 'cell'

(B) Because 'Cellular' is in fact an ancient Sanskrit word merely spelt in Roman letters

(C) Because the specific architecture — one isolated cell per prisoner to block communication — has no single ready-made native term, so the borrowed word names that exact design

(D) Because colonial law required that prison names appear only in English

14. कालापानी is glossed by some as 'a black-coloured river'. Beyond simply being a NAME for the jail, which extra nuance of काल deepens its dread, per the chapter's spirit?

(A) काल means 'comfortable', softening the name into something pleasant

(B) काल also carries the sense 'time/death/doom', so the name evokes a deadly, one-way exile across dark seas, not merely a colour

(C) काल means 'short', implying the prisoners served only brief terms

(D) काल means 'sweet', referring to the taste of the water

15. कारागार and the Hindi कारखाना are easily confused. The structural fact that keeps them apart is:

(A) कारागार = कारा 'work' + गार 'place' → a workplace; कारखाना = a place of confinement

(B) कारागार = कारा 'confinement/cell' + (अ)गार 'house' → a house that holds people in (a prison); कारखाना = काम/कार 'work' + खाना 'place' → where goods are made (a factory)

(C) Both share the element कारा 'confinement', so both mean 'prison'

(D) कारागार contains खाना 'food' and so means a dining-hall, while कारखाना means a prison

16. जनजाति: is a feminine इकारान्त noun. Its प्रथमा एकवचन-द्विवचन-बहुवचन series is:

(A) जनजाति: – जनजातौ – जनजातिः

(B) जनजाति: – जनजाती – जनजातयः

(C) जनजातिम् – जनजाती – जनजातीनि

(D) जनजाति: – जनजात्यौ – जनजातीनि

17. A student writes: 'The four Andaman tribes are extinct, so the protective law is now meaningless.' Correcting with the chapter:

(A) The tribes are living communities still inhabiting the islands — the Sentinelese remain uncontacted — and Indian law actively protects them, so it matters greatly

(B) The student is right; the tribes died out and the law is a dead letter

(C) The tribes survive, but the chapter states the law was repealed

(D) The tribes are extinct, yet the law still guards their empty land

18. स्यः is a विशेषण of द्वीपः अण्डमानः. From its ending alone, you can deduce the head noun's gender, number and case to be:

(A) neuter, plural, accusative (matching वर्षाणि)(B) masculine, singular, nominative

(C) feminine, singular, nominative (matching जनजातिः)

(D) masculine, dual, instrumental

19. स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः = स्वातन्त्र्य + वीरः. As an epithet of Savarkar, the compound's internal relation is best read as:

(A) 'a freely-wandering soldier' — a copulative द्वन्द्व of two equal nouns

(B) 'a hero who loved his OWN freedom' — a self-referential bahuvrīhi about himself

(C) 'a free man who stayed un-imprisoned' — a negating compound

(D) 'hero OF freedom' — a षष्ठी-तत्पुरुष, the second member वीर qualified by the first in a genitive-like sense

20. कल्पनातीतम् describes the suffering. Splitting कल्पना + अतीत and identifying the sandhi:

(A) It is दीर्घ-स्वर-सन्धि: आ (of कल्पना) + अ (of अतीत) merge into long आ; meaning 'gone beyond imagination' = beyond what one can conceive

(B) It is विसर्ग-सन्धि with an avagraha, meaning 'imaginary, existing only in fancy'

(C) It is व्यञ्जन-सन्धि, meaning 'before imagining / anticipated'

(D) It is गुण-सन्धि giving ए, meaning 'a kind of imagination'

21. Suppose the chapter said सावरकरः कारागारात् मुक्तः अभवत्. The case of कारागारात् and the sense it adds are:

(A) पञ्चमी (ablative) — 'from the prison'; it expresses release away FROM the prison

(B) सप्तमी (locative) — 'in the prison', he remained inside

(C) तृतीया (instrumental) — 'by the prison', the prison did the freeing

(D) षष्ठी (genitive) — 'of the prison', he possessed it

22. Which sentence uses सोढवान् with fully correct agreement?

(A) सावरकराः घोरं कष्टं सोढवान् — a plural subject with a singular participle

(B) सीता घोरं कष्टं सोढवान् — a feminine subject with a masculine participle

(C) सावरकरः घोरं कष्टं सोढ्वा — the gerund standing as the main verb

(D) सावरकरः घोरं कष्टं सोढवान् — a masculine singular subject with a masculine singular participle

23. द्वीपसमूहः (used of the Andamans) = द्वीप + समूह. Choosing the English term that captures this exactly:

(A) 'archipelago' — a group/cluster of islands

(B) 'peninsula' — land almost surrounded by water

(C) 'continent' — a single vast landmass (D) 'reef' — a ridge of coral near the surface

24. The chapter pairs प्रवालप्रस्तराः (coral reefs) with नारिकेलवृक्षाः (coconut palms) under सौन्दर्यम्. Together these signal that the islands' beauty is essentially:

(A) alpine — glaciers, pines and snow (B) desert — dunes, cactus and dry winds

(C) tropical and marine — warm-island scenery of palms, white sand and reef-filled seas

(D) urban — skyscrapers, highways and factories

25. रत्नाकरः, used poetically of the surrounding sea, is built रत्न + आकर. Identifying the sandhi and the literal sense:

(A) विसर्ग-सन्धि; literally 'black water', an exact synonym of कालापानी

(B) गुण-सन्धि giving ए; literally 'maker of kings'

(C) दीर्घ-सन्धि (अ + आ → आ); literally 'mine/store of jewels' — the ocean as a treasury of gems and pearls

(D) यण्-सन्धि giving य; literally 'three-storeyed', a synonym of त्रितलात्मक

26. Why does taking कालापानी as merely 'a body of black water' fail as a translation, in the chapter's argument?

(A) Because the sea around the islands is genuinely jet-black in colour

(B) Because कालापानी is a proper NAME for the Cellular Jail and the agony of exile across the seas — a symbolic title, not a colour-description of water

(C) Because there is a real black-coloured river the prisoners had to cross

(D) Because the prisoners were literally made to drink discoloured water

27. मातृभूमि = मातृ + भूमि. The chapter's repeated use of this word for India frames Savarkar's sacrifice as:

(A) loyalty to his own birth-mother as a private family matter

(B) devotion to the land revered AS a mother — patriotism cast in the warmth of family love

(C) service rendered to the foreign crown that ruled the land

(D) attachment to a particular plot of farmland he personally owned

28. त्रितलात्मकम् कारागारम् describes the jail. Breaking त्रि + तल + आत्मक, the precise sense is:

(A) 'made of three coral tiles'

(B) 'able to hold only three prisoners'

(C) 'having three storeys for its nature/body' — a three-tiered (three-storeyed) building

(D) 'three centuries old'

29. Which mapping of word → literal build → meaning is correct on ALL THREE rows?

(A) द्वीप = द्वि+अप् = 'two-watered' (island); कारागार = कारा+(अ)गार = 'confinement-house' (prison); मातृभूमि = मातृ+भूमि = 'mother-land' (homeland)

(B) द्वीप = काल+पानी = 'black water'; कारागार = कारा+खाना = 'work-house'; मातृभूमि = 'a mother's grave'

(C) द्वीप = द्वि+अप् = 'two houses'; कारागार = कार+गार = 'car-maker'; मातृभूमि = 'a queen's land'

(D) द्वीप = त्रि+तल = 'three storeys'; कारागार = कारा+गार = 'coral house'; मातृभूमि = 'measured land'

30. A timeline of the islands consistent with the chapter is:

(A) The Mughals built the jail → the British freed all prisoners → the islands joined Sri Lanka

(B) Indian kings built the jail for tourists → the British made it a school → it is now a factory

(C) The tribes built the jail → Savarkar ruled the islands → the British added them to UNESCO

(D) The British built the Cellular Jail → freedom-fighters like Savarkar were exiled and suffered there → after independence India protects the islands and their tribes, now UNESCO-recognised

31. अण्डमानद्वीपः निकोबारद्वीपः च — the final च tells the reader that the two island-groups are:

(A) coordinated ('and') — named together as the territory's two island-groups

(B) contrasted ('but') — set in opposition to each other

(C) in a doubt-relation ('or') — only one of them actually exists

(D) in a possessive relation — Nicobar belongs to Andaman

32. In the compound निकोबारद्वीपः, only the second member द्वीपः carries the case-ending while निकोबार stays uninflected. This shows the compound is:

(A) a द्वन्द्व 'Nicobar and the island' (two separate things)

(B) a तत्पुरुष-type 'the Nicobar island', with द्वीप as the head taking the nominative singular

(C) a verb-form meaning 'islanding Nicobar' (an action)

(D) two unrelated words merely written adjacent

33. Reading द्वीपः, द्वीपौ, द्वीपाः as one declension series, how does it bear on the title-form द्वीपेषु?

(A) That series is the सप्तमी, and द्वीपेषु is simply its singular

(B) That series is the प्रथमा (nominative); द्वीपेषु is a DIFFERENT case altogether — सप्तमी बहुवचन (locative plural)

(C) That series is the द्वितीया, and द्वीपेषु is its dual

(D) That series is the तृतीया, and द्वीपेषु means 'by the islands'

34. वर्ष is a neuter noun. The एकवचन–द्विवचन–बहुवचन series in the accusative (the case दश वर्षाणि is in) is:

(A) वर्षः – वर्षौ – वर्षाः

(B) वर्षा – वर्षे – वर्षाः

(C) वर्षम् – वर्षौ – वर्षानि

(D) वर्षम् – वर्षे – वर्षाणि

35. प्रवालप्रस्तरैः ('with coral reefs', instrumental plural of masc. प्रस्तर). The एक–द्वि–बहु of the instrumental for प्रस्तर is:

(A) प्रस्तरः – प्रस्तरौ – प्रस्तराः

(B) प्रस्तरे – प्रस्तरयोः – प्रस्तरेषु

(C) प्रस्तरेण – प्रस्तराभ्याम् – प्रस्तरैः

(D) प्रस्तरम् – प्रस्तरौ – प्रस्तरान्

36. Choosing सोढवान् (past active participle) over the present सहते for Savarkar's enduring stresses that the suffering was:

(A) still ongoing in the present moment (B) yet to happen, in the future

(C) merely hypothetical and never actually borne

(D) fully undergone and completed in the past — a finished, historical act of endurance

37. If the chapter had honoured a woman freedom-fighter (वीराङ्गना) who bore the same suffering, सोढवान् would correctly become:

- (A) सोढवान् unchanged — participles never inflect for gender
- (B) सोढवती (the feminine of the क्तवतु participle)(C) सोढवांसः — simply its plural
- (D) सोढ्वा — the gerund, usable for any gender

38. A teacher offers four glosses of सोढवान्; exactly one is right:

- (A) 'he who endured/bore' — the agent of a completed bearing (root सह्)
- (B) 'he who crossed over' — from a root meaning to cross
- (C) 'he who counted' — from a root meaning to count
- (D) 'he who was drowned' — from a root meaning to sink

39. अण्डमानद्वीपः भारतस्य अस्ति — भारतस्य is षष्ठी. What relation does it express here?

- (A) origin/separation — the island came FROM India
- (B) interior location — the island sits IN India's heartland
- (C) belonging/possession — the Andaman island IS India's (a territory of India)
- (D) instrument — the island was made BY India

40. जनजाति is set against सामान्यजन ('common/general people'). The exact distinction the chapter intends is:

- (A) they are exact synonyms; both simply mean 'people'
- (B) जनजाति means a city crowd, while सामान्यजन means a tribe
- (C) जनजाति means prisoners, सामान्यजन means their guards
- (D) जनजाति = a specific, legally-recognised indigenous (tribal) community; सामान्यजन = the general public at large

41. Which sentence uses जनजाति in its correct, precise sense?

- (A) अण्डमानद्वीपे चत्वारः जनजातयः निवसन्ति — 'Four indigenous tribes live on the Andaman island'
- (B) कारागारे जनजातयः निर्मीयन्ते — 'Tribes are manufactured in the prison'
- (C) समुद्रे जनजातयः तरन्ति — 'Tribes (=fish) swim in the sea'
- (D) विद्यालये जनजातिः पठति — 'A tribe (=one student) reads in school'

42. The Sentinelese (सेण्टिनली) are singled out because they:

- (A) are the largest, most modernised tribe living in the islands' towns
- (B) were the builders and guards of the Cellular Jail
- (C) are among the world's last uncontacted peoples, living in isolation and shielded from outsiders by Indian law
- (D) are recent settlers who arrived with the British

43. That Indian law keeps outsiders away from the Sentinelese best illustrates which principle the chapter endorses?

- (A) respecting and protecting indigenous peoples' autonomy and their right to their own way of life
- (B) opening every community to tourism for economic gain
- (C) forcing all tribes to assimilate quickly into the mainstream
- (D) clearing tribal forests to expand the prison and ports

44. Why does the chapter set the islands' colonial-prison PAST beside their tribe-protecting PRESENT?

- (A) to argue that the tribes themselves built the colonial prison
- (B) to claim the prison and the tribes are one and the same thing
- (C) to suggest the islands have no present-day life worth protecting
- (D) to show the same islands carry both a painful colonial past and a present duty of care — for freedom's memory and for indigenous peoples alike

45. Which single statement about Savarkar is fully consistent with the chapter (every clause true)?

- (A) A poet who wrote for ten days in a comfortable Andaman library, then sailed home
- (B) A British officer who built the jail and counted its three storeys
- (C) A merchant exiled for one year who endured mild discomfort for personal profit
- (D) A freedom-hero who, for the Motherland's independence, bore unimaginable suffering in the Cellular Jail (कालापानी) for ten years

46. Synthesising the chapter, which one statement is true on ALL its clauses?

- (A) An Indian archipelago in the Bay of Bengal, beautiful with coral and palms, holding the Cellular Jail (कालापानी) where Savarkar bore ten years for freedom, and home to protected indigenous tribes
- (B) A Sri Lankan archipelago of snowy peaks, with a Mughal factory and no inhabitants
- (C) An Indian desert with a British school where Savarkar studied for ten days
- (D) A river delta owned by the tribes, who built the Cellular Jail for tourists

47. A student claims: 'सोढवान् is a future verb and कालापानी is an actual black river.' The fully correct replacement is:

- (A) the student is correct on both counts
- (B) सोढवान् is past, but कालापानी really is a black river
- (C) सोढवान् is the past active participle of सह् ('he bore'), and कालापानी names the Cellular Jail (the sea-exile), not a literal river
- (D) कालापानी is the jail, but सोढवान् is indeed a future verb

48. Final synthesis — choose the option in which the Sanskrit form, its grammar, AND the chapter-fact all line up:

- (A) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is a द्वन्द्व of द्वि + अप् ('two islands'), praised in द्वीपेषु, an instrumental
- (B) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपा + अण्डमानः (दीर्घ-sandhi giving आ), and द्वीपेषु is the accusative dual

- (C) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपः + अण्डमानः (visarga-sandhi, ऽ marks the dropped अ), and the Andaman is praised among the islands (द्वीपेषु, locative) as the lovely one
- (D) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपः + नण्डमानः (an न lost), and द्वीपेषु is the genitive singular

49. A travel writer pens: 'कालापानी — relax at India's serene Black-River retreat!' What is wrong, per the chapter?

- (A) nothing is wrong; कालापानी is indeed a riverside retreat
- (B) only the spelling is off; the 'river retreat' meaning is fine
- (C) the colour is wrong; the river is actually blue, not black
- (D) कालापानी is not a river or retreat at all; it is the name of the Cellular Jail and the agony of exile — a place of memory, not leisure

50. Knowing द्वि = 'two' and अप् = 'water', which geographical term shares द्वीप's exact morphological idea (land defined by surrounding water)?

- (A) 'continent', because it too is simply land
- (B) 'estuary', because it means two rivers meeting
- (C) 'archipelago', because it means a single rock
- (D) 'peninsula' (paene + insula = 'almost an island') — and 'island/isle' itself

51. अप् ('water') survives meaningfully inside which word, illustrating the same element seen in द्वीप?

- (A) दीप ('a lamp'), whose प is the same अप्
- (B) द्वीप itself ('water on two sides') — here अप् denotes the surrounding water
- (C) पाप ('sin'), which is said to contain अप्
- (D) रूप ('form'), whose प is taken to be अप् 'water'

52. Which word-meaning pairing is CORRECT?

- (A) द्वीपः = a tribe
- (B) सोढवान् = he sang
- (C) कारागारम् = prison
- (D) जनजातिः = a prison

53. Which grammar pairing is CORRECT?

- (A) सोढवान् = future tense; द्वीप = 'black water'
- (B) द्वीपेषु = nominative singular; स्म्यः = an adverb
- (C) कारागार = a factory; जनजाति = common folk
- (D) सोढवान् = past active participle ('he bore'); द्वीप = द्वि + अप् ('island')

54. The chapter's setting as a संवादः (dialogue touring the islands), rather than a flat paragraph, mainly serves to:

- (A) hide the facts so the reader learns nothing
- (B) prove that only spoken Sanskrit can be correct
- (C) let questions and answers unfold the geography, history and vocabulary step by step, drawing the reader into discovery
- (D) replace the Sanskrit vocabulary with English sentences

55. The islands' place on the यूनेस्को-विश्वदायाद-सूची (UNESCO World Heritage list) is, within the chapter, recognition of:

- (A) the prison being the world's largest industrial factory
- (B) the islands hosting the world's busiest shopping malls
- (C) the islands' outstanding natural beauty and ecological/cultural value worth preserving for all humanity
- (D) the islands having the world's tallest mountain peaks

56. Reading the apposition द्वीपोऽण्डमानः ('the island, the Andaman'), what case are BOTH द्वीपः and अण्डमानः in, and why must they agree?

- (A) द्वीपः is nominative but अण्डमानः is genitive ('island of the Andaman')
- (B) द्वीपः is locative (from द्वीपेषु) and अण्डमानः nominative
- (C) Both are accusative, since the title is the object of an unstated verb
- (D) Both are प्रथमा (nominative) singular; as appositives naming the same referent they share case, number and gender

57. A student says the avagraha ऽ in द्वीपोऽण्डमानः 'is pronounced as a glottal pause, so it is a sound, not a sign of something deleted.' The most accurate correction is:

- (A) The avagraha is never pronounced and never marks anything; it is purely decorative
- (B) The avagraha adds a brand-new अ that was not there in either original word
- (C) The avagraha converts the preceding ओ back into a visarga
- (D) However it is voiced in recitation, in writing it functions to MARK an elided अ; its job is to record the dropped vowel of the sandhi

58. Putting घोरं कष्टम्, दश वर्षाणि and मातृभूमेः स्वातन्त्र्याय together, the portrait of Savarkar is designed to evoke in the student:

- (A) pity for a man who made a foolish, pointless choice
- (B) amusement at an exaggerated adventure tale
- (C) reverence and gratitude for sacrifice and endurance in the cause of national freedom
- (D) envy of the comforts he supposedly enjoyed in the jail

59. घोरं कष्टम् pairs an adjective with a neuter noun. In घोरं कष्टं सोढवान्, what case is कष्टम् in, and what role does it play?

- (A) प्रथमा (nominative) — कष्टम् is the subject doing the bearing
- (B) द्वितीया (accusative) singular — it is the direct OBJECT, the suffering that was borne, with घोरम् agreeing as its adjective
- (C) तृतीया (instrumental) — the suffering is the means 'by which' he bore
- (D) सप्तमी (locative) — 'in the suffering' he dwelt

60. A student renders the title as 'Two-watered, the lovely Andaman' by translating द्वीप as 'two-watered' inside the running sentence. Why is this rendering wrong even though द्वि+अप् does mean 'two-watered'?

- (A) Because etymology is not the sentence-meaning: in actual use द्वीप simply means 'island', so the title reads 'Among the islands, the Andaman is the lovely island'
- (B) Because द्वीप never had anything to do with water, so 'two-watered' is invented
- (C) Because the title actually uses द्वीपेषु as 'two waters', changing the whole sense
- (D) Because रम्यः, not द्वीपः, is the real noun, so 'island' drops out entirely

Worked Solutions

1. (D) The avagraha records the elision of an initial short अ of the second word once the preceding विसर्ग had turned into ओ. No consonant is lost, no long vowel forms, and it is not a nasal mark — it is purely the trace of a dropped अ.

2. (D) द्वीपः and अण्डमानः are two distinct nominative words joined by visarga-sandhi across the title; it is not one compound. The phrase identifies the Andaman as the island in question, so only the word-join reading with the apposition meaning holds.

3. (C) The pattern is अः + अ → ओ + ऽ (the अ elided, marked by avagraha). सूर्यः+अस्तम् therefore yields सूर्योऽस्तम्, with the avagraha obligatory and no vowel-merger or nasal.

4. (B) The avagraha exists only to record the अ that was elided in sandhi; reversing the sandhi restores exactly that अ. It is not added by a spelling rule, not migrated from द्वीपो, and the avagraha is not itself a sounded अ.

5. (B) स्म्य agrees with the noun it qualifies in gender, number and case — here the feminine singular nominative गङ्गा, giving स्म्या. It does not agree with the locative नदीषु, and it is not invariable.

6. (B) Saying 'among the islands, the Andaman is the lovely one' selects one member out of a set — the निर्धारण use. No action's place is named, there is no motion sense, and the locative is never the passive agent.

7. (A) The क्तवतु form सोढवान् names the agent who completed the action; the क्त form सोढः names the object that underwent it. They differ in voice (active vs passive orientation), not tense, and are not interchangeable.

8. (C) Stretches of time over which an action runs stand in the accusative of duration. 'Ten years' is neither the subject, nor an instrument, nor a single point 'in the tenth year' — it measures how long the enduring lasted.

9. (A) Forming the past participle of सह् triggers a regular sound-change of the aspirate-plus-त cluster into ढ, giving सोढ. It is not an error, not influenced by दश, and not a random substitution.

10. (A) द्वीप is preserved as a fixed lexical form with लlengthened ई; the regular यण्-outcome द्व्यप् is not what tradition handed down. The word still transparently means 'two-watered' (island), so अप् is meaningful, not silent, and the द्व+ईप story is fabricated.

11. (A) Both the noun and its qualifying adjective move to the dual together (द्वीपौ स्म्यौ); concord in number is obligatory. द्वीप does inflect, the adjective cannot lag behind, and no gender change is involved.

12. (B) उप in this nominal compound carries its locational sense 'near/beside', naming the sea adjacent to Bengal — the Bay of Bengal. It does not double the word, सागर means 'sea/ocean' not mountain, and उप is not a negation.

13. (C) The loanword is kept because it labels a precise design (solitary cell-by-cell isolation) for which no single native word was at hand. Sanskrit can certainly form compounds, the word is genuinely English, and the retention reflects naming convenience, not a legal order.

14. (B) काल spans 'black' and 'time/death', so कालापानी resonates with doom and a possibly final exile over the seas. The other glosses (comfortable, short, sweet) invert the grim connotation the name actually carries.

15. (B) The first element decides the meaning: कारा 'confinement' makes कारागार a prison, while 'work' makes कारखाना a factory. The other options swap or muddle these roots.

16. (B) A feminine इ-stem like जनजाति takes -ः / -ी / -अयः in the nominative singular/dual/plural, giving जनजातिः, जनजाती, जनजातयः. The other strings use impossible or neuter-style endings.

17. (A) Per the lesson these are surviving indigenous peoples, the Sentinelese famously uncontacted, and the law is in force precisely to shield them. Both the 'extinct' premise and the 'repealed law' claim are false.

18. (B) रस्यः carries the masculine-singular-nominative ending, so by concord the noun it qualifies must share those three features — exactly what द्वीपः (masc. sg. nom.) has.

19. (D) स्वातन्त्र्यवीर means 'hero of/for freedom', a tatpuruṣa where वीर is the head and स्वातन्त्र्य stands in a genitive relation. It is not a dvandva of equals, not a selfish bahuvrīhi, and not a negation — and the chapter's narrative of suffering for national freedom fits only this reading.

20. (A) Here a final आ meets an initial अ, merging into a single long आ (दीर्घ-सन्धि), and अतीत ('gone beyond') yields 'beyond imagination'. There is no visarga, no consonant junction, and no guṇa ए.

21. (A) मुक्तः with कारागारात् takes the ablative of separation, 'freed FROM the prison'. It is not locative ('in'), not instrumental ('by'), nor genitive ('of').

22. (D) The क्तवतु participle must agree with its subject in gender and number; सावरकरः (masc. sg.) pairs only with सोढवान् (masc. sg.). A plural subject needs सोढवन्तः, a feminine needs सोढवती, and सोढा (gerund) cannot serve as the finite verb.

23. (A) समूह ('group') plus द्वीप ('island') is a cluster of islands, precisely an archipelago. A peninsula is one near-island, a continent is a single landmass, and a reef is coral, not a group of islands.

24. (C) Coral and coconut palms are markers of warm tropical-island, sea-fringed landscapes, not alpine, desert or urban settings.

25. (C) रत्न (ending in अ) + आकर (beginning in आ) merge by दीर्घ-सन्धि to रत्नाकर, 'jewel-mine' — a poetic name for the sea. It is not कालापानी, not 'king-maker', and not 'three-storeyed'.

26. (B) The phrase names the prison and the dread of trans-oceanic exile; reading it as literal black water loses that proper-name, symbolic force. There is no real black sea, river or drinking-water at issue.

27. (B) मातृभूमि casts the homeland as a mother, so the sacrifice reads as patriotic love. It is not about his literal mother, not service to the colonial crown, and not ownership of farmland.

28. (C) त्रि 'three' + तल 'storey/level' + आत्मक 'having the nature of' yields 'three-storeyed'. The coral, three-prisoner and three-century readings each misread one of the parts.

29. (A) Only the first row-set keeps every gloss right: द्वीप 'two-watered' island, कारागार 'confinement-house' prison, मातृभूमि 'mother-land'. Each other option corrupts at least one etymology.

30. (D) Only the first sequence matches the chapter: a British-built jail, exile and suffering of freedom-fighters, then post-independence protection and UNESCO recognition. The others jumble builders, rulers and outcomes.

31. (A) च is the coordinating 'and', linking the two island-groups as a pair. It does not mean 'but', 'or', or signal possession.

32. (B) A single case-ending on the final head-member is the signature of a determinative (tatpuruṣa) compound 'the Nicobar island'. A dvandva would coordinate two referents, and there is no verb or chance adjacency here.

33. (B) द्वीपः/द्वीपौ/द्वीपाः is the nominative one-two-many; द्वीपेषु is the locative plural, a wholly different case, not a singular/dual of the nominative nor an instrumental.

34. (D) A neuter अ-stem in the accusative shows -म् / -ए / -आणि, giving वर्षम्, वर्षे, वर्षाणि. The masculine endings and the un-retroflexed -अनि are wrong.

35. (C) The instrumental of a masculine अ-stem is -एन / -आभ्याम् / -ऐः, i.e. प्रस्तरेण, प्रस्तराभ्याम्, प्रस्तैः. The other rows are the nominative, locative and accusative.

36. (D) The क्तवतु form marks a completed past action, so it presents the endurance as a finished historical fact, not a present, future or imagined one.

37. (B) क्तवतु participles do inflect for gender; the feminine of सोढवान् is सोढवती. It is not invariable, the plural सोढवांसः changes number not gender, and सोढ्वा is the indeclinable gerund.

38. (A) सोढवान् derives from सह् 'to bear/endure' and names the one who bore. Crossing, counting and drowning are unrelated roots foisted on the form.

39. (C) भारतस्य अस्ति states that the island belongs to India — a genitive of possession. Origin would need the ablative, interior-location the locative, and instrument the instrumental.

40. (D) जनजाति denotes a defined indigenous/Scheduled community, whereas सामान्यजन is everyone in general. They are not synonyms, not swapped, and neither means prisoners or guards.

- 41. (A) Only the first sentence treats जनजाति as a human indigenous community that 'lives' on the islands. The others absurdly make tribes manufactured, swimming fish, or a single school-student.
- 42. (C) The Sentinelese are famed as an uncontacted, legally-protected people. They are not town-dwelling moderns, not jail-builders, and not colonial-era settlers.
- 43. (A) The protection signals respect for indigenous autonomy. It is the opposite of forced tourism, assimilation, or forest-clearing.
- 44. (D) The juxtaposition holds together memory of sacrifice and present-day stewardship of indigenous peoples. It does not blame the tribes for the prison, equate the two, or deny present worth.
- 45. (D) Every clause of the first option — freedom-hero, for the Motherland, unimaginable suffering, Cellular Jail, ten years — matches the chapter. The others falsify the role, place, duration or motive.
- 46. (A) Only the first option is wholly accurate across geography, ownership, beauty, the jail, Savarkar's ten years, and the protected tribes. Each other option breaks on multiple clauses.
- 47. (C) Both halves of the claim are wrong: सोढवान् is a completed past participle, and कालापानी is the prison's name, not a river. Only the option that corrects both is right.
- 48. (C) Only the first option correctly identifies the visarga-sandhi with avagraha-marked elision, treats द्वीपेषु as a locative, and matches the chapter's praise of the Andaman. The rest misname the sandhi, the elided element, or the case.
- 49. (D) कालापानी names a prison and the trauma of exile, so calling it a serene retreat is wholly mistaken — there is no river or resort at all, not merely a spelling or colour error.
- 50. (D) द्वीप names land in terms of the water around it; 'island/isle' and 'peninsula' (paene-insula, 'almost-island') share that water-defined idea. A continent is land without that defining water, an estuary is a river-mouth, and an archipelago is a group, not the morphological idea.
- 51. (B) Only in द्वीप does अप् genuinely contribute the meaning 'water'. The प in दीप, पाप and रूप is incidental and unrelated to the word for water.
- 52. (C) कारागार means 'prison'. द्वीप is an island (not a tribe), सोढवान् means 'he bore' (not sang), and जनजाति is a tribe (not a prison).
- 53. (D) सोढवान् is a past active participle and द्वीप derives from द्वि+अप् ('two-watered' island). The other pairs misclassify the participle, the etymology, the case of द्वीपेषु, or the meanings of कारागार and जनजाति.

- 54. (C) The dialogue form leads the reader through facts via give-and-take, aiding discovery. It is not meant to conceal facts, make a point about spoken Sanskrit, or swap in English.
- 55. (C) UNESCO recognition here honours natural and cultural significance worth conserving, not factories, malls or mountains.
- 56. (D) Appositional nouns naming one thing must agree; here both stand in the nominative singular. Neither is genitive, the locative belongs only to द्वीपेषु, and there is no governing verb making them accusative.
- 57. (D) Whatever its recitational realisation, the written avagraha's grammatical role is to flag the elision of an originally-present अ. It is not decorative, does not introduce a new vowel, and does not restore the visarga.
- 58. (C) The combination of severe suffering, long duration and a noble purpose is meant to stir reverence and gratitude — not pity, amusement, or envy of comfort.
- 59. (B) कष्टम् is the accusative object of सोढवान् ('he bore the suffering'), with घोरम् concurring as its adjective. It is not the subject, an instrument, or a locative — the bearer is Savarkar, the thing borne is the suffering.
- 60. (A) An etymology explains a word's origin, not its everyday meaning; द्वीप functions in the sentence as 'island'. The water-origin is real (so 'invented' is false), द्वीपेषु is the locative plural 'among the islands' (not 'two waters'), and रम्यः is the adjective, not the head noun.
