Chapter 11: द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः (The Andaman Islands)

Paper 5 — (progressively harder)

Subject	Sanskrit (NCERT Class 7, Deepakam)
Chapter	11 — द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः (The Andaman Islands)
Total Questions	60 (Multiple Choice, single correct)
Maximum Marks	240
Suggested Time	90 minutes

Marking scheme: +4 for each correct answer · -1 for each wrong answer · 0 if unattempted.

Instructions: Each question has four options (A), (B), (C), (D); exactly one is correct. Classic P5 traps: ऽ marks an elided short अ after विसर्ग→ओ (never a lost consonant, long-vowel merge, or अनुस्वार) and joins two SEPARATE words (not a समास); द्वीपेषु is सप्तमी बहुवचन of निर्धारण, never nominative/instrumental/dual; द्वि+अप्→द्वीप lengthens इ→ई as a fixed form (not यण्, not अ+अ); सोढवान् is क्तवतु (past ACTIVE, agent-oriented, completed, inflects for gender→सोढवती, with regular ह्→ढ internal sandhi), unlike passive सोढः, gerund सोढ्वा, or any future; दश वर्षाणि is द्वितीया of DURATION; रम्यः/घोरम् concord in līṅga-vacana-vibhakti; कालापानी NAMES the jail (काल = both 'black' and 'death/doom'); कारागार ('confinement-house', prison) is the false-friend of Hindi कारखाना ('factory'); जनजाति is a legally-recognised indigenous tribe, the Sentinelese uncontacted not extinct. Do not write on this paper — mark answers on your answer sheet.

1. Applying the exact rule that turned द्वीपः + अण्डमानः → द्वीपोऽण्डमानः, predict the join of देवः + अपि. Which result, and why?

- (A) देवोऽपि — the विसर्ग after अ becomes ओ before the अ of अपि, and that following short अ is elided, the loss marked by ऽ
- (B) देवापि — the अ of देव and the अ of अपि merge into a single long आ by दीर्घ-सन्धि
- (C) देवंपि — the विसर्ग is replaced by an अनुस्वार before अपि
- (D) देवोपि — the join gives ओ but no avagraha is ever written when the next word is अपि

2. A student writes the sandhi-viccheda of नरोऽयम् as नरो + अयम्, keeping ओ with the first word. Why is this wrong?

- (A) It is correct: ओ is a permanent part of नर, so नरो is the true first word
- (B) It is wrong only because the second word should be यम्, the अ never having existed

- (C) It is wrong because the real split is नर + ओयम्, the ओ migrating to the second word
(D) The ओ belongs only to the sandhi-form; undoing it restores the original विसर्ग, giving नरः + अयम्, with the elided अ of अयम् put back

3. In द्वीपोऽण्डमानः, exactly how many of these three things happened at the join: (i) विसर्ग changed to ओ, (ii) a short अ was elided, (iii) a consonant was deleted?

- (A) Two — (i) and (ii) only; no consonant was deleted
(B) All three — विसर्ग→ओ, अ elided, and an न् deleted
(C) Only one — just the विसर्ग→ओ change, with nothing elided
(D) Two — (ii) and (iii), an अ and a consonant lost, but the विसर्ग stayed as is

4. The avagraha ऽ in द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is sometimes called a 'silent placeholder'. Which statement captures its true grammatical job most precisely?

- (A) It lengthens the preceding ओ into a long vowel for recitation
(B) In writing it marks the spot where a short अ was elided after the विसर्ग became ओ — its job is to record that dropped vowel
(C) It is a punctuation mark separating two unrelated words with no grammatical meaning
(D) It restores the विसर्ग whenever the verse is chanted aloud

5. Which of these pairs would, by the SAME sandhi seen in द्वीपोऽण्डमानः, produce a form written WITHOUT any avagraha?

- (A) बालः + अत्र, which becomes बालोऽत्र with an avagraha
(B) शिशुः + अयम् in its अः-equivalent, which would still show the avagraha
(C) गजः + अपि → गजोऽपि, which keeps the avagraha
(D) रामः + ईशः → रामेशः — here ओ never forms and no short अ is elided, so no avagraha is needed

6. A pupil claims द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is a single compound word (समास) because 'it is written joined together.' The best correction is:

- (A) Correct — any two words written without a space form a समास
(B) Being written joined is just sandhi; this is a sentence-level join of two independent nominative words (द्वीपः, अण्डमानः) in apposition, not a समास
(C) It is indeed a समास, specifically a द्वन्द्व meaning 'island and Andaman'
(D) It is a समास because the avagraha is the mark that fuses words into a compound

7. In the title द्वीपेषु रम्यः द्वीपोऽण्डमानः, replacing the locative द्वीपेषु with the locative singular द्वीपे would change the sense to:

- (A) 'In/on the island the Andaman is lovely' — losing the 'singled out from a GROUP' (निर्धारण) force that the plural carried
(B) No change at all — singular and plural locatives mean exactly the same thing here
(C) 'By the islands the Andaman is made lovely' — turning it into an instrument
(D) 'Among two islands the Andaman is lovely' — the singular meaning exactly two

8. द्वीपेषु is to द्वीप as ____ is to वन (forest, neuter). Complete the analogy in the same case and number.

- (A) वनानि (B) वनेन
(C) वनयोः (D) वनेषु

9. The निर्धारण (singling-out) sense of द्वीपेषु रम्यः could equally be expressed by which case-form of द्वीप?

- (A) द्वीपानाम् — the षष्ठी बहुवचन ('among/of the islands'), since निर्धारण allows either the locative or the genitive of the larger group
(B) द्वीपान् — the द्वितीया बहुवचन ('the islands' as objects)
(C) द्वीपैः — the तृतीया बहुवचन ('by the islands')(D) द्वीपाय — the चतुर्थी एकवचन ('for the island')

10. Which sentence correctly uses द्वीपेषु in its निर्धारण sense?

- (A) द्वीपेषु गच्छति बालकः — 'The boy goes to the islands' (motion-towards)
(B) द्वीपेषु निर्मितम् कारागारम् — using द्वीपेषु to mean 'by the islands a prison was built'
(C) द्वीपेषु अण्डमानः रमणीयतमः — 'Among the islands, the Andaman is the most beautiful'
(D) द्वीपेषु द्वौ एव स्तः — 'There are exactly two islands', द्वीपेषु meaning 'two'

11. A student parses द्वीपेषु as 'two waters' by splitting it द्वि + प + एषु. Why is this wrong on two grounds?

- (A) It is wrong only because द्वीप means 'prison', so it should read 'in the prisons'
(B) द्वीप is a single fixed lexeme meaning 'island' (not splittable into a live द्वि + प here), and -एषु is simply the locative-plural ending; द्वीपेषु = 'in/among the islands'
(C) It is wrong only because -एषु is actually a nominative ending, so it means 'two islands appear'
(D) It is essentially right: द्वीपेषु does literally mean 'in two waters'

12. If the chapter spoke of being 'in the two islands' (Andaman AND Nicobar specifically as a pair), the correct locative form of द्वीप would be:

- (A) द्वीपेषु — the locative plural, which means three or more
(B) द्वीपे — the locative singular, 'in the one island'
(C) द्वीपौ — the nominative dual, 'the two islands' (as subject)
(D) द्वीपयोः — the सप्तमी द्विवचन (locative dual, 'in the two islands')

13. A grammarian says: 'द्वि ends in इ, so द्वि + अप् should give द्व्यप् by यण्-सन्धि; therefore द्वीप is impossible.' The most accurate reply is:

- (A) The grammarian is right; the only correct form is द्व्यप् and द्वीप is an error
(B) द्वीप actually comes from द्व + ईप, with no connection to अप् at all
(C) द्वीप is a fixed, traditionally lengthened formation — the इ becomes long ई rather than the glide य् — preserving the meaning 'water on two sides' even though the surface form does not follow ordinary यण्
(D) The अप् is silent, so no sandhi happens and द्वीप is unrelated to 'water'

14. Knowing अप् means 'water', which other Sanskrit/word-family item below genuinely contains that same अप् 'water' element, as it does in द्वीप?

- (A) रूप — its प is the same अप् 'water'
(B) अप्सरा — literally one who moves in the waters (अप् 'water' is real here)
(C) दीप — its प is the same अप् 'water' (D) पाप — it is built from the water-word अप्

15. The morphological idea behind द्वीप (land defined by the water on two sides) is matched by the English 'peninsula' = paene + insula. What does that Latin build literally say?

- (A) 'two waters' — paene 'two' + insula 'water'
(B) 'almost an island' — paene 'almost' + insula 'island', i.e. land nearly surrounded by water
(C) 'inner sea' — paene 'inner' + insula 'sea'
(D) 'a great island' — paene 'great' + insula 'island'

16. Which English word is morphologically the LEAST like द्वीप (does NOT share its 'land-defined-by-surrounding-water' idea)?

- (A) island
(B) continent — a vast landmass, not defined by water around it
(C) isle (D) peninsula

17. सोढवान् and a passive form सोढः both come from सृह्. What does each foreground?

- (A) सोढवान् foregrounds the object endured; सोढः foregrounds the endurer
(B) Both foreground the same agent and are freely interchangeable
(C) सोढवान् foregrounds the AGENT who completed the bearing ('he who bore'); सोढः foregrounds the THING borne ('that which was endured')
(D) सोढवान् is future and सोढः present — they differ only in tense, not in what they foreground

18. The stem सोढ in सोढवान् shows ढ where the root सृह् has ह्. The best account is:

- (A) regular internal sandhi — the root-final aspirate combining with the participle's त produces the retroflex ढ, yielding the stem सोढ
(B) a printing error; the stem should read सहवान्
(C) the influence of दश ('ten'), which lent its ध-like sound to the verb
(D) a random euphonic substitution with no rule behind it

19. If two freedom-fighters (masculine) together bore the suffering, सावरकरः नेहरुः च घोरं कष्टम् _____, the correctly agreeing form of सोढवान् would be:

- (A) सोढवन्तः — the masculine plural of the क्तवतु participle, agreeing with a plural (dual+) subject
(B) सोढवान् — left unchanged, since participles never inflect for number
(C) सोढवती — the feminine form
(D) सोढ्वा — the indeclinable gerund used as the finite verb

20. A pupil glosses सोढवान् as 'he who will endure'. Two errors are bundled here. Which statement names BOTH correctly?

- (A) It is indeed future, but the error is only that it should be feminine सोढवती
- (B) It is not future but a COMPLETED past sense, and it is not a plain finite verb but the क्तवतु past-active PARTICIPLE
- (C) It is past, and the only error is that सोढवान् is actually a noun, not a participle
- (D) It is future and a participle — the pupil's only error is the spelling

21. Match each form of root सह् to its description. Which pairing is wholly correct?

- (A) सोढवान् = gerund; सोढः = future; सोढा = present participle
- (B) सोढवान् = passive past; सोढः = active past; सोढा = a finite verb
- (C) सोढवान् = past active participle ('he bore'); सोढः = past passive participle ('endured/borne'); सोढा = gerund ('having borne')
- (D) सोढवान् = present tense; सोढः = imperative; सोढा = an adjective of place

22. Which sentence shows सोढवान् with FULLY correct agreement and meaning?

- (A) वीराङ्गना घोरं कष्टं सोढवान् — a feminine subject with a masculine participle
- (B) बालकाः घोरं कष्टं सोढवान् — a plural subject with a singular participle
- (C) स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः सावरकरः कारागारे घोरं कष्टं सोढवान् — masc. sg. subject, masc. sg. participle, 'he bore terrible suffering in prison'
- (D) सावरकरः घोरं कष्टं सोढा — the gerund standing in for the finite verb

23. Why does the chapter's choice of सोढवान् (rather than the present सहते) shape how we read Savarkar's ordeal?

- (A) It presents the suffering as still happening right now, ongoing in the present
- (B) It presents the enduring as a finished, historical act fully undergone in the past, fitting a completed ten-year imprisonment now looked back upon
- (C) It presents the suffering as something that will only happen in the future
- (D) It presents the suffering as hypothetical and never actually borne

24. In सावरकरः दश वर्षाणि कष्टं सोढवान्, the phrase दश वर्षाणि is in which case, and what exactly does it express?

- (A) प्रथमा (nominative) — 'ten years' is the subject that did the bearing
- (B) द्वितीया (accusative) of DURATION — 'for ten years', measuring how long the enduring continued
- (C) तृतीया (instrumental) — the suffering was borne 'by means of ten years'
- (D) सप्तमी (locative) — the event happened 'in the tenth year'

25. वर्ष is a neuter अ-stem. Its accusative एकवचन-द्विवचन-बहुवचन series (the बहुवचन being the form in दश वर्षाणि) is:

- | | |
|-----------------------------|------------------------------|
| (A) वर्षः — वर्षौ — वर्षान् | (B) वर्षम् — वर्षौ — वर्षानि |
| (C) वर्षा — वर्षे — वर्षाः | (D) वर्षम् — वर्षे — वर्षाणि |

26. दश ('ten') stands before वर्षाणि without changing its own ending. What does this tell you about दश in this Class-7 usage?

- (A) दश must be in the same accusative-plural form वर्षाणि takes, i.e. it should read दशानि
- (B) दश is a verb here meaning 'they number ten', so it needs no ending
- (C) दश is the subject in the nominative, while वर्षाणि is its object
- (D) दश is used here as an indeclinable cardinal that simply qualifies वर्षाणि, so it does not take its own case-ending agreeing with the noun

27. Suppose the chapter had said सावरकरः एकं वर्षं कष्टं सोढवान्. How does एकं वर्षम् differ grammatically from दश वर्षाणि?

- (A) एकं वर्षम् is nominative (subject) while दश वर्षाणि is accusative
- (B) Both are accusatives of duration, but एकं वर्षम् is singular ('for one year') while दश वर्षाणि is plural ('for ten years')
- (C) एकं वर्षम् is locative ('in one year') while दश वर्षाणि is instrumental
- (D) They are identical in number; एकम् and दश both force the plural -आणि ending

28. रम्यः agrees with द्वीपः अण्डमानः. If the chapter instead singled out a NEUTER noun, e.g. वनेषु ____ वनम् ('among forests, the lovely forest'), the adjective filling the blank would be:

- (A) रम्यः
- (B) रम्या
- (C) रम्याणि
- (D) रम्यम्

29. From the ending of रम्यः alone, what three features of द्वीपः must be inferred?

- (A) masculine, singular, nominative
- (B) neuter, plural, accusative
- (C) feminine, singular, nominative
- (D) masculine, dual, instrumental

30. In घोरं कष्टं सोढवान्, the adjective घोरम् agrees with कष्टम्. Both घोरम् and कष्टम् are therefore in which case, and why?

- (A) प्रथमा (nominative) — कष्टम् is the subject doing the bearing, घोरम् agreeing as subject-adjective
- (B) तृतीया (instrumental) — the suffering is the means by which he bore
- (C) सप्तमी (locative) — 'in terrible suffering' he dwelt
- (D) द्वितीया (accusative) singular neuter — कष्टम् is the OBJECT borne, and घोरम् concords with it as its adjective

31. If the title praised TWO islands — द्वीपौ रम्यौ — which two changes from द्वीपः रम्यः have both occurred?

- (A) The noun shifted to the dual द्वीपौ, and the adjective concorded to the dual रम्यौ
- (B) Only the adjective changed; द्वीप never inflects for number
- (C) The noun became plural and the adjective stayed singular
- (D) The noun became feminine dual and the adjective neuter

32. कारागारम् is built कारा + (अ)गार. Which English rendering tracks the parts most exactly?

- (A) 'work-house' — कारा 'work' + गार 'house', i.e. a factory
- (B) 'coral-house' — कारा 'coral' + गार 'house', a reef shelter
- (C) 'confinement-house' — कारा 'confinement/cell' + अगर 'house', i.e. a prison
- (D) 'two-water-house' — कारा 'two waters' + गार 'house', an island home

33. मातृभूमि = मातृ + भूमि. The chapter's repeated use of this word for India frames Savarkar's sacrifice as:

- (A) loyalty to his own birth-mother as a private family matter
- (B) service rendered to the foreign crown that ruled the land
- (C) devotion to the land revered AS a mother — patriotism cast in the warmth of family love
- (D) attachment to a plot of farmland he personally owned

34. द्वीपसमूहः = द्वीप + समूह. The single English word that captures this exactly is:

- (A) peninsula — land almost surrounded by water
- (B) continent — a single vast landmass
- (C) reef — a ridge of coral near the surface
- (D) archipelago — a group/cluster of islands

35. बङ्गोपसागरे = बङ्ग + उप + सागर. A pupil takes उप as a verb-prefix 'towards' and reads 'the sea moving towards Bengal'. The correct parse is:

- (A) उप doubles बङ्ग, giving 'the sea of the two Bengals'
- (B) सागर here means a mountain, so it is 'the peak near Bengal'
- (C) उप negates सागर, so it means 'the dry land of Bengal, not a sea'
- (D) उप here means 'near/beside', so बङ्ग + उप + सागर = 'the sea beside Bengal' = the Bay of Bengal

36. स्वातन्त्र्यवीरः = स्वातन्त्र्य + वीरः. As an epithet of Savarkar, its internal relation is best read as:

- (A) षष्ठी-तत्पुरुष 'hero OF freedom' — वीर is the head, qualified by स्वातन्त्र्य in a genitive-like sense
- (B) द्वन्द्व 'a freely-wandering soldier' — two equal nouns coordinated
- (C) बहुव्रीहि 'a hero who loved his own freedom' — self-referential
- (D) a negating compound 'a free man who was never imprisoned'

37. कल्पनातीतम् describes the suffering. Splitting कल्पना + अतीत, identify the sandhi AND the meaning.

- (A) दीर्घ-स्वर-सन्धि: आ (of कल्पना) + अ (of अतीत) merge into long आ; meaning 'gone beyond imagination' = beyond what one can conceive
- (B) विसर्ग-सन्धि with an avagraha; meaning 'imaginary, existing only in fancy'
- (C) व्यञ्जन-सन्धि; meaning 'before imagining / anticipated'
- (D) गुण-सन्धि giving ए; meaning 'a kind of imagination'

38. रत्नाकरः, used poetically of the sea around the islands, is built रत्न + आकर. Identify the sandhi and the literal sense.

- (A) विसर्ग-सन्धि; literally 'black water', an exact synonym of कालापानी
- (B) गुण-सन्धि giving ए; literally 'maker of kings'
- (C) यण्-सन्धि giving य; literally 'three-storeyed', a synonym of त्रितलात्मक
- (D) दीर्घ-सन्धि (अ + आ → आ); literally 'mine/store of jewels' — the ocean as a treasury of gems and pearls

39. त्रितलात्मकम् describes the Cellular Jail. Breaking त्रि + तल + आत्मक, the precise sense is:

- (A) 'made of three coral tiles' (B) 'able to hold only three prisoners'
- (C) 'three centuries old'
- (D) 'having three storeys for its nature/body' — a three-tiered (three-storeyed) building

40. काल in कालापानी is said to carry TWO senses. Which pair best deepens the dread the name evokes?

- (A) 'black' AND 'time/death/doom' — so the name suggests dark, deadly seas and a one-way, possibly final exile
- (B) 'comfortable' AND 'short' — softening the name into a brief, easy stay
- (C) 'sweet' AND 'cool' — describing the taste and temperature of the water
- (D) 'white' AND 'sacred' — making it a holy bathing site

41. Why does taking कालापानी as merely 'a body of black water' fail as a translation, per the chapter?

- (A) Because the sea around the islands is genuinely jet-black in colour
- (B) Because कालापानी is a proper NAME for the Cellular Jail and the agony of trans-oceanic exile — a symbolic title, not a colour-description of water
- (C) Because there is a real black-coloured river the prisoners had to cross
- (D) Because the prisoners were literally made to drink discoloured water

42. A tourism poster reads: 'कालापानी — book your stay at the Black-River Spa!' Identify the single best correction.

- (A) Nothing is wrong; कालापानी is indeed a riverside spa
- (B) Only the spelling is off; the 'river spa' meaning itself is fine
- (C) कालापानी is no river or spa at all; it names the Cellular Jail and the trauma of exile — a place of memory and mourning, not leisure
- (D) Only the colour is wrong; the river is actually blue, not black

43. Which statement about कालापानी is true on BOTH its reference and its literal word-parts?

- (A) Its parts are कारा 'cell' + पानी 'water', and it names a literal black river
- (B) Its parts are काल 'time' + पानी 'house', and it names a tribal village
- (C) Its parts are काल 'black' + पानी 'water', but as a unit it NAMES the Cellular Jail and sea-exile, not an actual black river
- (D) Its parts are काल 'black' + पानी 'palm', and it names a coconut grove

44. कारागार and the Hindi कारखाना are easily confused. The structural fact that keeps them apart is:

- (A) कारागार = कारा 'confinement' + (अ)गार 'house' → a place that holds people IN (a prison); कारखाना = काम/कार 'work' + खाना 'place' → where goods are MADE (a factory)
- (B) कारागार = कारा 'work' + गार 'place' → a workplace; कारखाना = a place of confinement
- (C) Both share कारा 'confinement', so both mean 'prison'
- (D) कारागार contains खाना 'food' and means a dining-hall; कारखाना means a prison

45. If the chapter said सावरकरः कारागारात् मुक्तः अभवत्, the form कारागारात् is in which case, adding which sense?

- (A) सप्तमी (locative) — 'in the prison', he remained inside
- (B) तृतीया (instrumental) — 'by the prison', the prison did the freeing
- (C) पञ्चमी (ablative) — 'from the prison'; it expresses release away FROM the prison
- (D) षष्ठी (genitive) — 'of the prison', he possessed it

46. कारागार is a neuter अ-stem. Its locative एकवचन-द्विवचन-बहुवचन series (the form for 'in the prison(s)') is:

- (A) कारागारे – कारागारयोः – कारागारेषु
- (B) कारागारेण – कारागाराभ्याम् – कारागारैः
- (C) कारागारस्य – कारागारयोः – कारागाराणाम्
- (D) कारागारात् – कारागाराभ्याम् – कारागारेभ्यः

47. In context, सावरकरः कारागारे दश वर्षाणि कष्टं सोढवान् rules out reading कारागार as 'factory' because the surrounding words describe:

- (A) machines, wages and manufactured goods — fitting a factory
- (B) books, shelves and quiet reading — fitting a library
- (C) ten years of imprisonment and unimaginable suffering borne for the Motherland — only a prison fits this
- (D) prayers, idols and offerings — fitting a temple

48. जनजातिः is a feminine इकारान्त noun. Its प्रथमा एकवचन-द्विवचन-बहुवचन series is:

- (A) जनजातिः – जनजातौ – जनजातिः
- (B) जनजातिम् – जनजाती – जनजातीनि
- (C) जनजातिः – जनजाती – जनजातयः
- (D) जनजातिः – जनजात्यौ – जनजातीनि

49. जनजाति is set against सामान्यजन ('common/general people'). The exact distinction the chapter intends is:

- (A) they are exact synonyms; both simply mean 'people'
- (B) जनजाति = a specific, legally-recognised indigenous (tribal) community; सामान्यजन = the general public at large
- (C) जनजाति means a city crowd, while सामान्यजन means a tribe
- (D) जनजाति means prisoners, सामान्यजन means their guards

50. Which sentence uses जनजाति in its correct, precise sense?

- (A) अण्डमानद्वीपे चत्वारः जनजातयः निवसन्ति — 'Four indigenous tribes dwell on the Andaman island'
- (B) कारागारे जनजातयः निर्मीयन्ते — 'Tribes are manufactured in the prison'
- (C) समुद्रे जनजातयः तरन्ति — 'Tribes (=fish) swim in the sea'
- (D) विद्यालये जनजातिः पठति — 'A tribe (=one student) reads in school'

51. A pupil says: 'Since the Sentinelese are uncontacted, they must already be extinct, so the protective law is pointless.' The chapter-based correction is:

- (A) Correct — uncontacted means none survive, so the law is a dead letter
- (B) Uncontacted is the opposite of extinct — they are a LIVING people kept in isolation, and Indian law actively protects them, so it matters greatly
- (C) They survive, but the chapter says the protective law was repealed
- (D) They are extinct, yet the law still guards their empty land

52. That Indian law keeps outsiders away from the Sentinelese best illustrates which principle the chapter endorses?

- (A) opening every community to tourism for economic gain
- (B) forcing all tribes to assimilate quickly into the mainstream
- (C) respecting and protecting indigenous peoples' autonomy and their right to their own way of life
- (D) clearing tribal forests to expand the prison and ports

53. Why does the chapter set the islands' colonial-prison PAST beside their tribe-protecting PRESENT?

- (A) to argue that the tribes themselves built the colonial prison
- (B) to show the same islands carry both a painful colonial past and a present duty of care — for freedom's memory and for indigenous peoples alike
- (C) to claim the prison and the tribes are one and the same thing
- (D) to suggest the islands have no present-day life worth protecting

54. प्रवालप्रस्तराः appears under the islands' सौन्दर्यम्. प्रवाल most precisely denotes:

- (A) a coconut palm growing on the shore
- (B) a prison wall made of stone
- (C) coral — the reef-building marine organism / the coral-reef material
- (D) a black-watered river inlet

55. नारिकेलवृक्षाः (coconut palms) and प्रवालप्रस्तराः (coral reefs) listed together under सौन्दर्यम् signal that the islands' beauty is essentially:

- (A) alpine — glaciers, pines and snow
- (B) desert — dunes, cactus and dry winds
- (C) urban — skyscrapers, highways and factories
- (D) tropical and marine — warm-island scenery of palms, white sand and reef-filled seas

56. सागर in बङ्गोपसागर means 'sea/ocean'. Which poetic synonym for the sea also appears in the chapter's description of the islands' waters?

- (A) पर्वतराजः — 'king of mountains', the Himalaya
- (B) कारागारम् — 'house of confinement', a prison
- (C) रत्नाकरः — 'jewel-mine', the ocean as a store of gems and pearls
- (D) जनजातिः — an indigenous tribal community

57. Final synthesis — choose the option in which the Sanskrit FORM, its GRAMMAR, and the CHAPTER-FACT all line up.

- (A) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः is a द्वन्द्व of द्वि + अप् ('two islands'), praised in द्वीपेषु, an instrumental
- (B) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपः + अण्डमानः (visarga-sandhi, ऽ marks the elided अ), द्वीपेषु is a locative plural of निर्धारण, and the Andaman is praised among the islands as the lovely one
- (C) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपा + अण्डमानः (दीर्घ-sandhi giving आ), and द्वीपेषु is the accusative dual
- (D) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः = द्वीपः + नण्डमानः (an न lost), and द्वीपेषु is the genitive singular

58. Which single statement is true on ALL its clauses, synthesising the chapter?

- (A) A Sri Lankan archipelago of snowy peaks, with a Mughal factory and no inhabitants
- (B) An Indian desert with a British school where Savarkar studied for ten days
- (C) A river delta owned by the tribes, who built the Cellular Jail for tourists
- (D) An Indian archipelago in the Bay of Bengal, lovely with coral and coconut palms, holding the Cellular Jail (कालापानी) where Savarkar bore ten years for freedom, and home to law-protected indigenous tribes

59. A pupil offers four claims; exactly ONE is wholly correct on both its grammar and its chapter-fact. Which?

- (A) सोढवान् is the past active participle of सह् ('he bore'), and कालापानी names the Cellular Jail (the sea-exile), not a literal river
- (B) सोढवान् is a future verb ('he will bear'), and कालापानी is an actual black river
- (C) कारागार means 'factory' (= Hindi कारखाना), and जनजाति means 'common people'
- (D) द्वीप means 'prison', and the Andamans lie to the west of India

60. A pupil renders the title as 'In two waters the lovely Andaman' by reading द्वीप as 'two waters' and द्वीपेषु as a plural. Why is this doubly wrong?

- (A) It is wrong only because द्वीप never had anything to do with water, so 'two waters' is invented
- (B) It is wrong only because रम्यः, not द्वीपः, is the real noun, so 'island' drops out entirely
- (C) It is essentially right; द्वीपेषु does mean 'in two waters'
- (D) In running use द्वीप simply means 'island' (the 'two-watered' is only its etymology), and द्वीपेषु is the locative plural 'among the islands' — so the title reads 'Among the islands, the Andaman is the lovely island'

Worked Solutions

1. (A) The rule is अः before a word-initial अ becomes ओ, after which that अ drops and the drop is recorded by the अवग्रह. So देवः + अपि gives देवोऽपि. No long आ forms (that needs आ/अ + अ in a single word), no nasal appears, and the avagraha is obligatory whenever the अ is elided.

2. (D) द्वीपोऽण्डमानः-type joins arise from विसर्ग → ओ plus elision of the next अ. Reversing them must give back the विसर्ग (नरः) and the full अयम्. नरो is not an independent word, the अ of अयम् genuinely existed (the avagraha records it), and ओ cannot drift to the second word.

3. (A) The विसर्ग of द्वीपः became ओ and the initial अ of अण्डमानः was then dropped (marked by ऽ). No consonant ever stood at that boundary, so nothing consonantal was deleted. The विसर्ग did not survive unchanged either.

4. (B) However it is realised in chanting, the written अवग्रह exists to flag the अ that the sandhi elided. It does not lengthen ओ, it is not mere punctuation between unrelated words, and it never brings back the विसर्ग.

5. (D) The avagraha appears only when विसर्ग→ओ is followed by an elided short अ. रामः + ईशः involves अः before ई (not अ), giving रामेशः by a different (गुण) process with no ओ and no elided अ, hence no avagraha. The other joins all have अः + अ → ओऽ.

6. (B) Sandhi merely smooths the sound at a word-boundary; both द्वीपः and अण्डमानः remain separate nominative words naming the same thing (apposition). A समास would fuse them into one word with a single ending — which has not happened here. The avagraha marks an elision, not compounding.

7. (A) द्वीपेषु (locative PLURAL) selects the Andaman out of the whole set of islands — the निर्धारण use. द्वीपे (singular) names just one island as a location, dropping the 'one out of many' nuance. The locative is never instrumental, and the singular does not mean 'two'.

8. (D) द्वीपेषु is the locative plural. The locative plural of the neuter अ-stem वन is वनेषु. वनानि is nominative/accusative plural, वनेन is instrumental singular, and वनयोः is the dual locative/genitive.

9. (A) When singling one out from a group, Sanskrit uses either the locative or the genitive of that group; so द्वीपानाम् रम्यः ('loveliest of the islands') matches द्वीपेषु रम्यः. The accusative (object), instrumental (means) and dative (purpose) express none of this selection sense.

10. (C) निर्धारण picks the superlative member out of a set, exactly as in 'among the islands, the Andaman is loveliest'. The locative does not mark a destination of motion, is not an instrument ('by'), and the plural never means precisely 'two'.

11. (B) In actual use द्वीप is one word meaning 'island' (its द्वि+अप् origin is only etymology, not the running sense), and -एषु is the regular locative plural. So द्वीपेषु is 'among the islands'. द्वीप never means 'prison', -एषु is not nominative, and the literal 'two waters' is the etymology, not the meaning in the sentence.

12. (D) Exactly two calls for the dual; the locative dual of द्वीप is द्वीपयोः. द्वीपेषु (plural) covers three or more, द्वीपे is singular, and द्वीपौ is the nominative dual (subject), not a locative.

13. (C) Tradition handed down द्वीप with a lengthened ई, not the regular यण्-outcome द्व्यप्. The word still transparently means 'two-watered' (island), so अप् is meaningful, the द्व+ईप् story is fabricated, and अप् is not silent.

14. (B) अप्सरा ('moving in the waters') genuinely carries अप् 'water', just as द्वीप does. The प in रूप, दीप and पाप is incidental and unrelated to the word for water.

15. (B) 'Peninsula' literally means 'almost an island', sharing द्वीप's water-defined notion of land. paene is 'almost' (not 'two', 'inner' or 'great'), and insula is 'island' (not 'water' or 'sea').

- 16. (B) द्वीप names land in terms of the water encircling it; 'island', 'isle' and 'peninsula' (almost-island) all share that water-defined idea. A 'continent' is simply a large landmass, not framed by surrounding water — so it is the odd one out.
- 17. (C) क्तवतु (सोढवान्) is agent-oriented and active in sense; the क्त form सोढः is patient-oriented and passive. They differ in voice/orientation, not tense, and are not interchangeable; the option that swaps their orientations is the trap.
- 18. (A) Forming the past participle of सह् triggers a regular sound-change of the aspirate-plus-त cluster into ढ, giving सोढ. It is not a misprint, not caused by दश, and not random.
- 19. (A) क्तवतु participles agree with their subject in number; a plural subject takes सोढवन्तः. The singular सोढवान् would not agree, सोढवती is feminine, and सोढ्वा (gerund) cannot serve as the main verb.
- 20. (B) सोढवान् carries a completed (past) sense, the opposite of future, and is the क्तवतु past-active participle, not a finite future verb. The traps keep the false 'future' or treat it as a noun.
- 21. (C) सोढवान् (क्तवतु) is the past ACTIVE participle, सोढः (क्त) the past PASSIVE participle, and सोढ्वा the indeclinable gerund. The other rows swap voices, invent tenses, or mislabel the gerund.
- 22. (C) सावर्करः (masc. sg.) pairs only with सोढवान् (masc. sg.). A feminine subject needs सोढवती, a plural subject needs सोढवन्तः, and the gerund सोढ्वा cannot be the sentence's main verb.
- 23. (B) The क्तवतु participle marks a completed past action, so the ordeal reads as a finished historical fact — apt for a ten-year term recalled afterwards. The present, future and hypothetical readings all clash with that completed sense.
- 24. (B) A stretch of time over which an action runs stands in the accusative of duration: 'for ten years'. It is not the subject (Savarkar is), not an instrument, and not a single point 'in the tenth year'.
- 25. (D) A neuter अ-stem in the accusative takes -म् / -ए / -आणि, giving वर्षम्, वर्षे, वर्षाणि. The masculine endings (-ः/-औ/-अन्), the un-retroflexed -अनि, and the feminine series are all wrong.
- 26. (D) In this construction दश functions as a fixed cardinal qualifying वर्षाणि and does not inflect to दशानि; it is not a verb, and वर्षाणि (with दश) is the accusative of duration, not an object of a numeral-subject.
- 27. (B) Both express duration in the accusative; they differ only in number — एकं वर्षम् (singular, 'for one year') versus दश वर्षाणि (plural, 'for ten years'). Neither is nominative, locative or instrumental, and एकम् takes the singular, not the plural.

28. (D) रम्य concords with the head noun in gender, number and case. The head वनम् is neuter singular nominative, so the form is रम्यम्. रम्यः is masculine, रम्या feminine, and रम्याणि neuter plural — none match a neuter singular.

29. (A) रम्यः carries the masculine-singular-nominative ending, so by concord its head noun द्वीपः must share exactly those three features — which it does.

30. (D) कष्टम् is the direct object of सोढवान् ('he bore the suffering'), so it stands in the accusative singular neuter, and its adjective घोरम् concords. The bearer is Savarkar (nominative), so कष्टम् is not the subject, nor an instrument, nor a locative.

31. (A) Concord in number is obligatory, so both noun and adjective move to the dual together: द्वीपौ रम्यौ. द्वीप does inflect, the adjective cannot lag, and no gender change is involved.

32. (C) कारा means 'confinement/cell' and अगार 'house', so कारागार is a 'house of confinement' = prison. कारा is not 'work' (that misreads it as the Hindi कारखाना), nor 'coral', nor 'two waters'.

33. (C) मातृभूमि casts the homeland as a mother, so the sacrifice reads as patriotic love. It is not his literal mother, not service to the colonial crown, and not ownership of private farmland.

34. (D) समूह 'group' + द्वीप 'island' = a cluster of islands, i.e. an archipelago. A peninsula is one near-island, a continent a single landmass, and a reef is coral, not a group of islands.

35. (D) उप in this nominal compound carries the locational sense 'near/beside', naming the sea adjacent to Bengal — the Bay of Bengal. It does not double the word, सागर means 'sea' not 'mountain', and उप is not a negation.

36. (A) स्वातन्त्र्यवीर is a तत्पुरुष where वीर is the head noun standing in a genitive relation to स्वातन्त्र्य — 'hero of freedom'. It is not a द्वन्द्व of equals, not a self-referential बहुव्रीहि, and not a negation; the chapter's tale of suffering for national freedom fits only this.

37. (A) Here final आ meets initial अ, merging into a single long आ (दीर्घ-सन्धि), and अतीत ('gone beyond') yields 'beyond imagination'. There is no visarga, no consonant junction, and no गुण ए.

38. (D) रत्न (ending in अ) + आकर (beginning in आ) merge by दीर्घ-सन्धि to रत्नाकर, 'jewel-mine' — a poetic name for the sea. It is not कालापानी, not 'king-maker', and not 'three-storeyed'.

39. (D) त्रि 'three' + तल 'storey/level' + आत्मक 'having the nature of' = 'three-storeyed'. The coral-tile, three-prisoner and three-century readings each misread one of the parts.

40. (A) काल spans 'black' and 'time/death', so कालापानी resonates with darkness and doom — a deadly, one-way exile across the seas. The 'comfortable/short', 'sweet/cool' and 'white/sacred' readings invert the grim force the name actually carries.

41. (B) कालापानी names the prison and the dread of exile across the seas; reading it as literal black water loses that proper-name, symbolic force. There is no actual black sea, river or drinking-water at issue.

42. (C) कालापानी denotes a prison and the agony of sea-exile, so advertising it as a serene spa is wholly mistaken — there is no river or resort, not merely a spelling or colour slip.

43. (C) Literally काल 'black' + पानी 'water', yet the unit functions as a proper name for the Cellular Jail and the exile across the seas — not a real black river. The other splits and references are fabricated.

44. (A) The first element decides: कारा 'confinement' makes कारागार a prison, while 'work' makes कारखाना a factory. The other options swap the roots or invent a 'dining-hall' reading.

45. (C) मुक्तः with कारागारात् takes the ablative of separation, 'freed FROM the prison'. It is not locative ('in'), instrumental ('by'), nor genitive ('of').

46. (A) The locative of an अ-stem is -ए / -योः / -एषु, giving कारागारे, कारागारयोः, कारागारेषु. The other rows are the instrumental, the genitive, and the ablative respectively.

47. (C) The context of years of suffering endured for freedom can only describe a prison, not a factory, library or temple — so कारागार here is unambiguously 'prison'.

48. (C) A feminine इ-stem takes -ः / -ी / -अयः in the nominative singular/dual/plural, giving जनजातिः, जनजाती, जनजातयः. The other strings use impossible or neuter-style endings.

49. (B) जनजाति denotes a defined indigenous/Scheduled community; सामान्यजन is everyone in general. They are not synonyms, not swapped, and neither means prisoners or guards.

50. (A) Only the first sentence treats जनजाति as a human indigenous community that dwells on the islands. The others absurdly make tribes manufactured, swimming fish, or a single school-student.

51. (B) 'Uncontacted' means living in isolation, not extinct; the Sentinelese remain a living community, and the law is in force precisely to shield them. Both the 'extinct' premise and the 'repealed law' claim are false.

52. (C) The protection signals respect for indigenous autonomy — the opposite of forced tourism, assimilation, or forest-clearing.

53. (B) The juxtaposition holds together memory of sacrifice and present-day stewardship of indigenous peoples. It does not blame the tribes for the prison, equate the two, or deny present worth.

54. (C) प्रवाल is coral, the reef-builder of the warm seas. It is not a coconut palm, not a prison wall, and not a river inlet.

55. (D) Coral and coconut palms are markers of warm tropical-island, sea-fringed landscapes — not alpine, desert or urban settings.

56. (C) रत्नाकरः ('jewel-mine') is a poetic name for the sea, fitting सागर's sense. पर्वतराज is a mountain, कारागार a prison, and जनजाति a tribe — none names the sea.

57. (B) Only the first option names the visarga-sandhi correctly (with the avagraha marking an elided अ), treats द्वीपेषु as a locative plural of निर्धारण, and matches the chapter's praise. The rest misname the sandhi, the elided element, or the case.

58. (D) Only the first option is wholly accurate across location, beauty, the jail, Savarkar's ten years and the protected tribes. Each other option breaks on multiple clauses (wrong country, terrain, builder or duration).

59. (A) सोढवान् is the completed past-active क्तवतु of सह्, and कालापानी is the jail's dread name, not a river. The other claims falsify the participle's tense, the meaning of कारागार/जनजाति, or the meaning of द्वीप and the islands' location (they lie to the east/south-east, in the Bay of Bengal).

60. (D) Etymology is not sentence-meaning: द्वीप functions as 'island', and द्वीपेषु is 'among the islands' (locative plural), giving 'Among the islands, the Andaman is the lovely island'. The water-origin is real (so 'invented' is false), and रम्यः is the adjective, not the head noun.
